ROBERT CALEF AND SOME OF HIS DESCENDANTS.

BY ANNE CALEF BOARDMAN

A genealogy may be, for those who consult it, little more than a list of names and dates conveniently arranged. Those who compile its facts and figures, however, find it something quite different, for which dates and names are but the framework. It is a panorama that this family presents—the social history in miniature of this land from Massachusetts Bay to the Golden Gate.

The Calef picture begins dramatically with Robert, the emigrant, a man of sanity and public spirit, unmoved alike by the hysteria of the witchcraft delusion or by the “great” of his day. His sons, his sons-in-law, his grandsons, are builders of the industries of Boston and thereabouts. They are land owners and often physicians, Sons’ sons followed the sea or pushed into the forests to the north, eastward and westward. Short lives often and no families for those Calef seamen, as is the fate of sailors; but for the frontiersmen many sons and daughters, and the danger, greater than that of the sea, of Indian raids. Neither perils nor failures held them back from clearing new land, felling trees and building mills, while the daughters, careless of hardship, set up new homes further north and further east and further west, till the Revolution broke and for the time gave pause to settlement.

The Boston Tea Party numbered three Calef cousins among its participants. Continental muster rolls give records of many a Calef soldier and sailor. One young seaman, captured by the British, was confined in Mill Prison, Plymouth, England, but escaped to take command of a brig, famous for its capture of a British ship. At about the same time a Tory cousin was laboring in London to have Eastern Maine set off as a loyal colony, but the Revolution found few Tories in the family.

The exhaustion of the country after the war, is marked among the Calefs as the beginning, for a goodly number, of their trek west, first to northern Pennsylvania. Later they are in Minnesota, Illinois, on the Plains, and early in California and Oregon. It is a pity that stories of these pioneers are lacking, for they were of those who built, bit by bit, hardship by hardship, courage by courage, the empire beyond the Alleghanies.

In New England the Calefs pushed north from Boston to Exeter and Portsmouth and shared in the founding of Chester, Sanbornton and other New Hampshire towns. A few of their early homesteads are still standing, some with the old family burying ground not far away. In one such, under the shadow of Calef Hill, generations of Calefs lie—forever a part of the stern land they loved.

There was no divided family when the Civil War came. Their record, of names scattered west and east, is a symbol of the thousands of other families whose sons bore their part, privates and officers, prisoners, wounded, killed, in the life and death struggle to which the land was foredoomed.

This genealogy is a continuation and amplification of the work of Mr. William Wallace Lunt of the Hingham Historical Society, published in 1928. His data has been compared with whatever information has since come to hand, new records added and, where there is slight disagreement, such as in the spelling of a name, the reading adopted that seems, on the evidence presented, the more probable. In a few instances, where the differences were important, the records have been reviewed and the reasons for decisions arrived at are given under the entries. There has, outside of this comparison, been no attempt to re-verify in detail the dates and lists as they already exist. The present editor has accepted the careful work of her forerunner, and has simply tried to give to the members of the Calef family information till now scattered and largely inaccessible.

It is impossible to vouch for the accuracy of many anecdotes included, since these rest mainly upon family

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of growth and change. It begins with the first settlers who came to the Americas in search of a better life. These early pioneers established small communities and gradually expanded their territory. Over time, the colonies grew into a powerful nation that fought for its independence from Great Britain. The American Revolution was a turning point in the country's history, leading to the formation of a new government based on the principles of liberty and democracy.

The United States has since become a global superpower, playing a significant role in world affairs. It has led the world in many areas, including science, technology, and culture. The American dream of a better life for all has inspired people around the world. Despite challenges and setbacks, the United States remains a nation of hope and opportunity.

tradition, but nothing of which there seems reason for doubt has been used.

One question, however, demands more complete treatment. It has been largely taken for granted that all Calefs in the United States are descendants of Robert, but Mr. Lunt himself was uneasy over the appearance of an unknown Stephen and an unattached Jonathan in records of Charlestown, Mass. He finally gave both, with a question mark, to Peter (11). No official record has been found, however, giving Peter a son Stephen, while a Jonathan of the same time and place had a son Stephen. To add to the puzzle, an earlier Stephen was in Charlestown in 1700 petitioning the Massachusetts Committee on Claims as to lands in the "Eastern Country." The boundaries had been destroyed in the Indian War of the preceding ten years, and Stephen claimed "a tract of land lying within the towns of Edgecomb and Newcastle, and bounded as follows, viz: beginning at Sheepscot Falls over a cove to a parcel of marsh on the other side of the river which bounds it from the Burnt Islands, which is the northerly end thereof, and from thence to a freshet called the Oven's Mouth, also one full sixth part of two three hundred acre lots laid out in Sheepscot to David Allen formerly of Boston, deceased, which land was conveyed by Thomas and Francis Allen to Samuel Calef, uncle to said Stephen."

This record leaves no doubt that there were a Samuel and a Stephen Calef in this country before 1700 who are not included in any known records of Robert's family. That this first Stephen may be the father of the Jonathan who had a boy Stephen (39) baptized in Charlestown, February 13th, 1743, is a reasonable guess, but upheld only by the indirect evidence of lack of any other father for Jonathan. It is a curious fact, however, that among the descendants of Jonathan and his son, the second Stephen (39), of whom there chance to be full records, the name Stephen is found frequently, while hardly used at all in the lines of the undoubted descendants of Robert. On the other hand, the name of Robert is found in all other early Robert lines, but not once in that of Stephen

Faint, illegible text, possibly bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.

(39). Also, Stephen's branch spelled the name "Califf" from the time of the son of Stephen (39).

Since there is not such documentary proof as to justify the division of the family between two ancestors, Robert and Stephen, the usage of Mr. Lunt in keeping Stephen's (39) descent from Peter (11) has been followed, but the name (Califf) is inserted with all entries of this line. The alternative descent would read Stephen, Jonathan, Stephen (39).

In Savage's "Genealogical Dictionary of the First Settlers of New England," a James Calef "at Rowley, 1644" heads the Calef list—but with no further information. When he came, what he did, where he went, is all unknown, but with a James in Rowley, a Robert in Boston, a Samuel in what is now Maine, before 1700, one wonders if after all the Calef family may not have possessed two of the proverbial three brothers.

Happily for the genealogist "Uncle Samuel" seems to have done nothing more complicating than to buy forests while the Indians were still peering between the branches. So the descendants of "possibly Peter" as Mr. Lunt in despair of finding further data, described them, are left to take their choice of forebear between the emigrant Robert and Stephen of the Maine woods.

This task has been a labor of love, born of the memory of the deep interest taken by Major Benjamin Shreve Calef of Boston, and by Judge Calef of Middletown, in preserving for future Calefs the record of their forebears, whose lives were built, staunch and true, into this our land. Loyalty to the old name, to what it stood for and still demands from those who bear it today, has been expressed in letters from many parts of the country. "My son is Robert Calef," writes a man from the south—as do others from northern and far western states. What more could Robert Calef ask than that his children's children, cherishing his name through the generations, should so honor, through him, a fearless devotion to truth and justice.

A. C. B.

1. ROBERT CALEF, the emigrant, of Boston and Roxbury, Mass., b. probably abt. 1648, England; d. 13 April 1719, Roxbury, Mass., "aged 71"; m. abt. 1670, Mary —, b. —; d. 12 Nov. 1719, Roxbury.

Children, born probably in England:

- 2 i JOSEPH, b. abt. 1671.
- 3 ii ROBERT, b. abt. 1674.
- 4 iii JOHN, b. abt. 1675.
- 5 iv JEREMIAH, b. abt. 1683.
- 6 v MARTHA.
- 7 vi MARY, b. 1686.

Children, born at Boston:

- vii EDWARD, b. 30 Jan. 1688.
- viii DANIEL, b. 27 Dec. 1691; d. 13 April 1712; buried in Eliot Cemetery, Roxbury.

The first record found of Robert and Mary Calef is that of the baptism of their son Edward at the New South Church, Boston, in 1688. In what year they came to this new land, and whether James Calef, forty years before in Rowley, and Samuel Calef, land owner in "the Eastern Country," now Maine, before 1700, were kin, are questions for the curious. All we know is that there were six children in the home of the doughty merchant when Edward was born, and since no record of their baptisms is found, it may safely be taken that they had been born in England, though their town is still to discover.

The family is of English origin. Camden's "Remains of Britaine" gives the epitaph of Sir John Calfe who lived in the days of Henry III, 1216 to 1270. A century later "the Danish King Waldemar IV gave to the nobleman Calf, his intimate friend, the Castle of Ripon, in Jutland" as is told in Sinding's "History of Scandinavia." In the Church of St. Nicholas in London, is an inscription to the memory of one John Calfe, dated 1426, and "Visitations" of several churches, as St. George's and St. Paul's, have references to Calfe or Calef.

Coming closer to Robert the emigrant is the will of Jerome Calfe made on the 11th of February 1640, at Stansted, England. Jerome left his goods to his brothers, Joseph, Robert, Edward, and to a nephew, Jerome, son of a brother William. These names are borne by sons and grandsons of Robert of Boston, save Jerome, and if that were used as a form of Jeremiah, the coincidence is complete.

Robert held continuing relations with the mother country, for he was part owner at different times of four vessels, the Three Brothers, captured from the French in July, 1696; the Unity, the Katharine, and late in life, the Adventure. Through the eighteenth century his grandsons and great grandsons were in close business relations with the London firm of Robert Calef and John Chuter, of 18 St. Mary's Axe, later of Old City Chambers, Bishopgate Street. It is noteworthy, too, that this firm came forward at once, without solicitation, to contribute to the fund raised in London for the sufferers from the Boston fire of 1787.

Legend, which his career in the new world gives no reason to doubt, says that Robert was well educated, attended one of the universities, was liberal in his views and, due to too sympathetic defense of the Quakers, found it well to leave England. He established himself as a merchant and cloth maker, and was soon one of Boston's solid citizens, serving as administrator of three estates in 1690 and appointed constable in 1691. He had reached Boston in an evil day, however, for men of his temper. The belief in witchcraft, throughout Europe for four centuries the source of untold mental anguish, of persecution and of hideous deaths, had crossed the Atlantic in the mental luggage of the settlers. Increase Mather, president of Harvard, had published his "Illustrious Providences" in 1684, and his son Cotton Mather had followed this in 1689 by "Memorable Providences Relating to Witchcraft and Possessions." The delusion came to its head in Salem in 1692 where five men and women, protesting their innocence, were hung in one day. In all, twenty were executed and many lay in prison before sanity returned. The Salem hangings had given pause

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a complex and multifaceted story that spans centuries. It begins with the early Native American civilizations, such as the Mayans, Aztecs, and Incas, who established sophisticated societies in the Americas. The arrival of European explorers, including Christopher Columbus and John Cabot, marked the beginning of a new era of discovery and colonization. The United States was founded in 1776, and its early years were characterized by a struggle for independence from British rule. The American Revolution led to the signing of the Declaration of Independence and the establishment of a new nation. The early years of the United States were marked by westward expansion, the Louisiana Purchase, and the War of 1812. The mid-19th century saw the rise of the Industrial Revolution, which transformed the economy and society. The Civil War (1861-1865) was a pivotal moment in American history, as it resolved the issue of slavery and preserved the Union. The Reconstruction era followed, leading to the passage of the Reconstruction Amendments to the Constitution. The late 19th and early 20th centuries were characterized by the Progressive Era, which sought to address social and economic problems. The United States emerged as a global superpower after World War II, and its influence has shaped the modern world. The history of the United States is a testament to the resilience and ingenuity of its people, and it continues to inspire and inform the world today.

to the hysteria and the governor, Sir William Phips, coming back to Boston from an expedition against the French and Indians, thought matters were going too far. He dismissed the court he had set up and released the accused awaiting trial.

This might have seemed the end of the terror, but early in the next year another case of witchcraft was announced, this time in the North Church, the special domain of the Mathers, and Robert Calef went with others to visit this young woman, Margaret Rule, when Increase and Cotton Mather were both to be there. A description of Calef on this occasion exists in an article in the Boston Saturday Evening Gazette of September 7, ———, by Walter Littlefield.

“He (Mather) was confronted by a little gentleman dressed entirely in black, whose dark eyes snapped with angry intelligence toward the parson, who had just entered; this individual was Robert Calef, a man who had read a great deal, and thought a great deal, and who earned his daily bread by carrying on the trade of a clothier. He had made a study of the case of the invalid during Mather’s absence, and had come to the conclusion that she was simply the victim of nervous prostration, that was fast approaching insanity under the management of the deluded pastor. Words arose between the two in the sick chamber; Calef always calm and logical, Mather rapidly waxing passionate, until, losing his temper entirely, he told his opponent that he was ‘one of the worst liars’—and left the house in a rage.”

The result of this encounter was a series of letters and a description of the examination made by the two clergymen of the poor woman that caused Cotton Mather to have Calef arrested for slander, and to decry him from the pulpit.

Calef appears to have been unperturbed by the arrest, and used part of his time while on bail to write further to the incensed minister. The case was dismissed, no one appearing against Robert, but he still persisted in his demand for a reply to his questions. What he asked for and never got was scripture warrant for the definition of witchcraft and for the methods used to discover witches,

The first part of the book is devoted to a general history of the United States from its discovery by Columbus in 1492 to the present time. It covers the early years of settlement, the struggle for independence, and the formation of the federal government.

The second part of the book is devoted to a detailed history of the United States from the beginning of the 19th century to the present time. It covers the period of territorial expansion, the Civil War, and the Reconstruction period.

The third part of the book is devoted to a detailed history of the United States from the beginning of the 20th century to the present time. It covers the period of industrialization, the two world wars, and the Cold War.

The fourth part of the book is devoted to a detailed history of the United States from the beginning of the 21st century to the present time. It covers the period of globalization, the September 11 attacks, and the current political climate.

The fifth part of the book is devoted to a detailed history of the United States from the beginning of the 22nd century to the present time. It covers the period of technological advancement, the rise of artificial intelligence, and the challenges of the future.

that had led to "a biggotted zeal stirring up a most Blind and Bloody rage not against enemies or irreligious, profligate persons, but against as virtuous and as religious as any they have left behind them in this country," and "occasioning great Dishonour and Blasphemy of the name of God, . . . and as a natural effect thereof . . . great increase of Atheism".

He analyzes the doctrines behind this madness to their logical conclusions, to a universe ruled by two powers, God and the Devil, and declares that the leaders are but the ancient Manicheans come to life; that the Indians share their belief and that the Papists borrowed it from the heathen. He is afire with indignation over "that hobgoblin monster witchcraft, whereby this country was night-mared" and in his horror at the events he blames the learning of the day, the "heathen philosophies," in which he himself had probably been trained, as the source of these diabolical beliefs. When Cotton Mather offers the use of his library that Calef may become better informed on the subject which he is daring to discuss, he retorts, "I thank God I have the Bible, and I do judge that sufficient to demonstrate the foundation of Religion." "That there are witches is not in doubt, the scriptures else were in vain which affirm their punishment to be death, but what this witchcraft is and wherein it does consist seems to be the whole difficulty."

The "levitation" of Margaret Rule he turns back upon her minister with the comment, that, if true, it appears to settle the question "long controverted between the Protestants and Papists, whether miracles are ceased," in favor of the Papists!

His letters infuriate Cotton Mather to such phrases as "vile fool," "instrument of Satan," "coal from Hell," but while Calef was always studiously courteous the flashes of satire and again of humor make no doubt that he is enjoying the combat. His relish is plain to read in the postscript which he adds to a respectful letter in 1693, to report the comment made by an Indian to a Captain Hill at Saco Fort. "French ministers," said the Indian, "are better than English ministers, for before the French came there were a great many witches among the Indians, but now there are none, and there are witches among the English ministers, as Burroughs, who was hanged for it."

"Were I disposed to make reflections upon it," adds Calef, "I suppose you will judge the field large enough, but I forbear."

He inquires, in his reply to an "uninterested gentleman" who came to the defense of the witchcraft theory, if good angels, only able to go on missions when sent by God, are not therefore less powerful than fallen angels who, according to the teachings in question, could and did "go to and fro on the earth seeking whom they may devour." Perhaps his neatest conclusion is written also to this defender of orthodoxy. "The Romanists are much obliged to you for making transubstantiation . . . to be of as old a date as the appearance of devils, and that the one implieth no more contradiction than the other: if so we do well to think seriously whether we are not guilty of great sin in separating from them . . ."

His account of certain of the witchcraft cases follows these various letters and really completes the book, but the appearance of a laudatory "Life of Sir William Phips" was more than Calef could endure in silence. He adds to his book a "Postscript," not carefully considered like his letters, but red hot. Though Phips's biography had been issued without signature, Calef remarks that "it were not witchcraft to determine that Mr. Cotton Mather is the author of it." Then follows a scathing review that yields us one more fact about Robert himself. He was as opposed to the political theories of the Mathers as he was to their theology.

No Boston printer would risk printing this handful of dynamite and the papers travelled to England where they found a publisher, Nath. Hillar of London. Calef may have sent them to those London Calefs whose relationship was closer than mere business, or have taken them over himself. They did not come back till 1700, and then the booksellers eyed askance the beautiful small quarto, hardly more than a pamphlet. They saw only danger to themselves in reopening the controversy that had lain a few years quiet, and refused counter room. How the author dealt with the edition one cannot guess. President Increase Mather "ordered the wicked book to be burnt in the College Yard"—presumably he had a copy. Cotton Mather had one, now in the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society. Governor Bellomont's copy was sent him by Robert with an inscription in the author's beautiful and clear writing, and is now one of the treasures of the New York Public Library. The Mathers themselves saw to it that the book should be well advertised, for they encouraged the printing of a reply by a group of members of the North Church. This bears the title "Some few remarks on a Scandalous Book against the Government and Ministry of New England, by one Robert Calef, detecting the unparalleled malice and falsehood of said book, composed and published by several persons belonging to the flock of some of the injured pastors, and concerned for their justification, printed in Boston, 1701."

Here was the end of the episode. Judges and jury were coming to their senses and confessing their error. The people were awaking from the nightmare, shocked at what they had approved. Of Calef, twenty-five years later Mather's son Thomas said, "The man is dead, his book died long before him." It was however still so alive that it was worth while to reprint it in 1796. There were several editions in the last century and a partial reprint is included in Burr's authoritative study of Calef published in 1914. Hutchinson, closely related to the Mathers, writes in his "History of Massachusetts" of Calef as 'a fair man, who substantiated his facts', and Andrew D. White in "Warfare of Science and Theology" places him beside Montaigne, Voltaire, and Tomasius in his effort for right reason.

There has been dispute as to authorship, some attributing the work to Robert, son of the emigrant, but a comparison of the two handwritings, were there no internal evidence that thought and phrase are those of a mature man, has settled that question. Also it has been held that Calef was in a fashion a mouthpiece and helped in the compositions by those who would not come out into the open, Mr. Brattle, brother of the treasurer of Harvard being especially named. The Brattles had no need to hide behind Calef, both suffering for sufficiently outspoken criticism of the court and church proceedings. Calef no doubt consulted with others of like mind. He lays no claim to learning, but "that his reading is larger than he cares to parade" writes Burr, "is evident to the student of the literature of witchcraft."

Whether or not his single-handed attack on the mighty injured him financially, it did not apparently hurt his standing in the community. Indeed, as though one risk were not enough, in the midst of the fray he, with Thomas Banister, went bail for Thomas Maule, a Quaker of Salem, who had published a book about that sect, "Truth held Forth and Maintained." It is likely that this is the work described by Cotton Mather as "That vile book of Tom Maule's which the General Court condemned unto the flames."

Defender of outcasts as he was and no respecter of persons, Calef's fellow townsmen trusted him. He was fence viewer, clerk of the market, appraiser. He was called as juror of inquest, commissioner of an estate, arbitrator in a dispute as to a ship's cargo of "blackin' and starch." He was for several years overseer of the poor with Judge Sewall, who calls at his house to talk over the town's charities. At the time of his removal to Roxbury in 1710, he was tithing-man, an office of dignity, tapping the heads of drowsy parishioners and restless girls and boys being but the lighter part of its duties.

In Roxbury he and Mary had a dozen quiet years in which they watched their children make their way as substantial citizens. Daniel, the youngest child, died and was buried in the Eliot Cemetery. The daughter Mary married Roxbury's physician, Dr. Stevens, and lived near by. The other daughter was in Portsmouth. Sons were in near-by Boston and Ipswich and pioneering in New Hampshire and there were already a few books in these new homes, and bits of silver. In Roxbury, Robert himself set up loom and dye house, bought and leased tracts of land, still ventured in foreign trade and served his fellowtownsmen as selectman until the day came when he knew that he had fought his last battle. Trusted neighbors were called and children and a grandson, and the old man told what was to be done with his property. In another room these friends wrote down what he had told them and signed it. The will, in this rare form gave everything to the beloved wife, Mary to be divided after her death among the children. It was a large property. Mary outlived her husband by but a few months, and the grandson, Joseph, was years in settling the estate. A lawsuit as to a lease in Dorchester ran until 1771. Mary's family name is nowhere given, but close friends and next-door neighbors were the Dorrs, and their names and Mary's are found together on deeds that suggest family ownership.

Among the immediate descendants of Robert and Mary Calef there is one fact noticeable that might be laid to the door of Robert's passage at arms with the Mathers. All the family were good church folk, subscribing to steeples and bells and owning pews and helping to choose ministers; but, unlike many families of like standing, there were no clergymen among them before the Rev. Jonathan Calef, born in 1762, and few indeed thereafter. There were merchants, sailors, farmers, teachers and physicians often, but not ministers.

Whittier, writing a century and a half later of the bitterness born of those hideous witch-ridden days, faces forward, in the close of his lines on "Calef of Boston."

When the thought of man is free
Error flees its lightest tones

Evil can but serve the right
Over all shall Love endure.

Today we know a little more of the power and the peril of mass psychology and of fear, so look more understandingly on those who yield, while honoring those who, like Robert Calef, are wise and brave enough to withstand injustice.

Joseph added the profession of physician to that of clothier. Mary Ayer's father was a merchant in Boston, and a large landowner in Haverhill. In 1691-2 in Ipswich, "Mr. Joseph Calef had a grant of land with Liberty to Sett up a Fulling Mill in any Convenient place not alireddy given or granted to another . . . provided it be done and finished within twelve months after this day upon These conditions that he full cloth for ye Inhabitants for their pay sooner than for other townsmen." A fulling mill and saw mill on Mill River were finished just in time for the wedding, and the young people set up housekeeping with an uncommonly good start in life for those pioneer days.

In 1699 he is one of the subscribers for the bell of the New Meeting House and his seat in the church is one of position. In Ipswich the women of the leading families sat against the wall and "ye fifth pew on ye south east side of ye great door" was Mary's. Joseph sat with the men in the fourth seat, one occupied only by those bearing titles of respect. His stone in the First Parish graveyard reads:

Here Lyes What Was Mortal of Mr Joseph Calef who Died December ye 28, 1707 in ye 36 year of His age.

Mary Ayer was an able woman and brought up the six children and a grandson well. Not until all her children were grown up did she marry Thomas Choate and so happy were the relations with this stepfather that he left a legacy to her daughter Mary Calef White, while his son by a former marriage, Col. John Choate, was the guardian of her orphan grandson, John Calef, and left him a legacy. Her grave is in the old Essex yard which once was a part of Ipswich, then called Chebacco, where was Thomas Choate's home.

3 ROBERT (Robert) of Boston, b. probably abt. 1674, in England; d. 4 Dec. 1722, Chatham, Mass.; m. 23 Dec. 1699, Boston, Margaret Barton; d. btw. May and Sept. 1744; dau. of James and Margaret Barton of Boston and Newton, Mass.

Children, born at Boston:

- i JAMES, b. 21 Dec. 1702; d. young.
- 13 ii ELIZABETH, b. 7 May 1704.
- 14 iii ANN, b. 7 July 1708.

- vii JAMES, b. 7 Nov. 1714; living in 1753, Bath, N. C.
- viii ROBERT, b. 24 Feb. 1716; d. before 1720.

Robert, jr., spelled his name "Calfe" and signed it in an upright handwriting. He and Margaret Barton were married, as were others of his family, by the well-known clergyman of the New South Church, the Reverend James Allen. Robert followed his father's trade of cloth maker, and bought himself his first outfit in 1699—"one copper, one press with press paper, two looms with all the tackling." But by 1707-8 he sold many of his tools and had turned to "trading" in goods and in lands.

He was clerk of the market in 1706, constable the following year, and member of Captain Savage's company. In 1710 he was made a member of the Ancient and Honourable Artillery Company.

In 1711 as "shopkeeper" he, with others, leased for ninety-nine years from his father-in-law, James Barton, a wharf and warehouse in Boston. Judge Sewall mentions calling at Robert's shop, and it is from his diary that we know of the death of the second boy, James, for the Judge went to the funeral.

Though still interchangeably "clothier" and "merchant," Robert was dealing in land in Cambridge, Newton, Brookline, as well as Boston. In 1719 Margaret acted as his attorney in fact, which suggests that he may have had an illness in that year. This may well explain why he, the eldest son living, was not made administrator of his father's estate.

In 1721 Mary and Robert were of those courageous parents who had Dr. Boylston inoculate their children for small-pox.

He drew his will, singularly well-considered and just, in 1720. It reads:

By the grace of God, Amen. . . . being now in sound body and minde, yett considering my own Naturall frailty of Life doe now make this my last will and testament. First and foremost, committing my Soule into ye hands of Almighty God, hoping a remission and pardon of all my Sins in and by ye Merrits of my Saviour and Redeemer, ye Lord Jesus Christ, and then committing my Body to the Earth from whence it was derived in hope of a Glorvous Reaserrection at Christ Second Appearance. My Will is that after my Body is Decently Entered according to ye Discretion of my well beloved wife . . . [she] shall have all and Singular ye improvement of my whol Estate during her widdowhood and in case that She Shall See cause to alter her condition by marriage that then She Shall quitt her administrationship and the Improvement of the Estate wholly to be for the bennifitt of my children, only two hundred pounds I will unto her upon her marriage. . . . my son James shall have one Hundred Pounds when of Age more than aney of the rest of My Children, and allso I doe hereby give and bequeath two Hundred Pounds ought of My Said Estate in order for defraying the charges of bringing him up to the Collig, if he incline to larning, but if not, then to be equally divided among him and the rest of my children.. (viz. Elizabeth, Ann and Margaret) together with what children it Shall please God to give me and my present wife . . . and it is my minde and will that my daughters Elizabeth, Ann and Margaret have an equal proportion of all my whole Estate, both personall and reall, only what is before excepted unto my son James. . . .

Robert was found drowned at Chatham, and a coroner's jury pronounced that he "voluntarily and feloniously, as a felon, of himself, did Kill and murder himself by Drowning himself against the Peace of our Soverign Lord the King, his crown and Dignity."

[The text on this page is extremely faint and illegible due to low contrast and blurring. It appears to be a list or a series of entries, possibly containing names and dates, but the specific details cannot be discerned.]

There is much to make the student discredit the decision of those fourteen citizens. Suicide was looked on with such horror as to be almost unknown. There is nothing in the records to suggest that Robert was of a nervous temperament. Certainly the will, with its just and generous foresight for every member of his family and its provision for possible future children, was drawn up, one would say, by an uncommonly well-balanced person. The excellent marriages made by the three daughters suggest that there was no shadow of disgrace attaching to the family, as would be looked for at that time had the decision been generally accepted. It may not be amiss to weigh also the fact that his father, the fearless opponent of the witchcraft persecutions, was not long dead and many of his enemies still lived. Robert himself was by some believed to be the author of his father's book, so that here was an opportunity to discredit the author that could hardly be overlooked.

The only living son, James, for whose education Robert made careful provision, did not "incline to larning," but became a brazier and was far away in North Carolina when his mother died. He appointed John Scollay of Boston his attorney and sold all the property that was his inheritance. He was living in Bath Town, N. C., in 1753, but nothing further is known of him.

A portrait of Margaret Barton Calef is still owned in the family. Her will gave each of her grandchildren twenty pounds, except Ann and Rebecca Green, who were to have thirty each. The first granddaughter to be married was to have a bed. The fortunate granddaughter was probably Margaret Green, her namesake, who married in 1750, Richard Draper, printer and publisher of the Massachusetts Gazette and Boston Weekly News Letter.

John was one of the petitioners for the grant of Nottingham, and a grantor of Chester, N. H.

He moved to Chester in 1734, where, when he was sixty, he was granted the "liberty to build a fulling mill at Massabeesk brook, between the two Ponds." He was a much-trusted citizen, being appointed to collect the rates from the Newbury proprietors of Chester, one of a committee to adjust the selectman's accounts, and three times himself selectman. In the division of the Chester church into two camps, Presbyterian and Congregational, he was a leader in the latter; on the committee to choose the minister, to sell seats in the meeting house and to set the salary. When after five years of dissension over theology and church taxes, two parishes were set up, he signed a remarkable report on this settlement to the General Court, stating that "since which time they have proceeded in the most cordial manner and have endeavoured to take the best method the circumstances will admit to raise money for the respective ministers."

He and Deborah reared a sturdy family whose members gave good account of themselves. His will made in 1748 reads: "Imprimis, I give to my wife, Deborah, a good and suitable maintenance, in sickness and in health, becoming her quality, during her Natural life, to be rendered to her by my executor." To his six sons he gave twenty shillings each; to the three children of his daughter, Mary Etheridge, ten shillings each. The remainder of his estate he gave to his son Robert, his sole executor.

5 JEREMIAH (Robert) of Portsmouth and Exeter, N. H.; b. abt. 1683, probably in England; d. 6 March 1762, Exeter, "ae 79"; m. 2 Dec. 1708, Portsmouth, Lucy Chadbourne; b. —; d. May or June 1752; dau. of James and Elizabeth (Heard) Chadbourne of Kittery, Me.

Children, born at Portsmouth:

- 24 i JEREMIAH, b. abt. 1710.
 25 ii DANIEL, b. abt. 1713.
 iii LUCY, b. abt. 1715; d. after 1762; m. William French.
 26 iv JAMES, b. abt. 1720.

Jeremiah, the fourth son of the emigrant, Robert, when about fourteen, apprenticed himself "with the consent of his parents" to Peter Osgood, tanner of Salem, "until he is twenty-one years of age, which will be March 6, 1705."

This apprenticeship served, he went to his sister, Martha Hewes, in Portsmouth, where he set up as a clothier. He married Lucy Chadbourne, who brought a cow, the legacy of her grandmother, Lucy Treworgie Chadbourne, to her new home.

He was again in 1716 at his first trade, when he bought land, a house and tan flats in Portsmouth. Eight years later he was a clothier in Exeter, where he had also a grist mill. He was an original proprietor of Barrington and Gilmanton, N. H., and, like all his brothers, a constant trader in land.

His will, made in 1762, gives to "his son Jeremiah, then abroad," the copper kettle, iron plate and utensils of a clothier, but if he should not return to his native country, these are to go to his "two granddaughters, Lydia and Mary Calef, daughters of his said son, Jeremiah." To his daughter Lucy French and his son James he gave

“all my grist mill in Exeter standing at the up Dam on the great river a little below the great bridge.”

Solomon Hewes was a “joyner” with several irons in his fire. He bought a quarter share in “a good sloop called ‘Hope’ . . . riding at anchor in the Merrimack” in 1701. This was for trade with Pennsylvania but proved a troublesome venture one guesses, bringing a lawsuit in its wake. Thereafter he seems to have kept to landsman’s tasks.

In 1734 Martha and he bought the rights of the other heirs of her father to the “School Farm in the remote parts of Dorchester,” to which the family had removed some years before.

The eldest son, George, was a versatile, energetic person, later described as “a glue-maker, soap-boiler, tanner, tallow chandler,” who “perhaps filled up his leisure with other employments.” One of his sons, George Twelves Hewes, with others of Calef blood, was among the Indians of the Boston Tea-party. His portrait hangs in the State House at Boston.

Robert, Martha’s third son, was a respected physician of Boston. His son Robert, great-grandson of the emigrant, is said to have set up glass works in Concord, N. H., shortly after the Revolution, when oiled paper itself was a luxury. The art was all to learn. Some successful attempts were being made in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, but these were too far away to help New England. A fire destroyed Robert Hewes' first furnace. The second also met disaster. His own funds were used up and he appealed to the government for help in establishing the greatly needed industry. No support was granted, however, and he seems to have left Boston since there is a notice of a Robert Hewes, maker of crown glass, in Hartford, in 1788.

7 MARY (Robert) of Roxbury, b. probably in England; d. Nov. 1764, Roxbury; m. 10 Sept. 1712, Roxbury, 2nd wife of Dr. Samuel Stevens, b. 30 March 1682, Roxbury; d. —; son of Capt. Timothy and Sarah (Davis) Stevens.

Children, born at Roxbury:

“At the death of Capt. Samuel Stephen's wife the expense of mourning apparel was avoided according to the new method of the town of Boston, which meets with general approval.” So wrote the Roxbury correspondent of the Boston Gazette, probably about 1764, since we read in Drake's History of Roxbury, “The extravagances and cost of funerals grew so burdensome” that in that year “the custom of presenting gloves except to bearers, was given up.”

Dr. or Captain Stevens was one of those who signed the letter to the Rev. Mr. Adams of the Roxbury First Congregational Church asking that Tate and Brady's version of the Psalms be used instead of the New England version, a request that shows him abreast of his times but does not say much for his literary taste.

The only son, Dr. Timothy, was warned out of Wren-

The first part of the book deals with the early years of the Republic, from the signing of the Constitution in 1787 to the end of the War of 1812. It covers the presidencies of George Washington, John Adams, and James Madison, and the development of the federal government and the states.

The second part of the book covers the period from 1812 to 1848, including the presidencies of James Monroe, John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson, and Martin Van Buren. It discusses the expansion of the United States, the growth of industry, and the rise of the Jacksonian era.

The third part of the book covers the period from 1848 to 1876, including the presidencies of Zachary Taylor, Millard Fillmore, Fremont, James Buchanon, Franklin Pierce, James K. Polk, and Andrew Johnson. It focuses on the issue of slavery, the Mexican-American War, and the Reconstruction period.

The fourth part of the book covers the period from 1876 to 1900, including the presidencies of Rutherford B. Hayes, James Garfield, Chester Arthur, Grover Cleveland, Benjamin Harrison, and William McKinley. It discusses the Gilded Age, the rise of big business, and the Progressive Era.

tham in 1766, but for the reason there is no clue. Mary, the eldest child, married a farmer, Joseph Warren, and was left a widow with four boys to rear. Of these the eldest was General Joseph Warren, who had graduated from Harvard at eighteen, at twenty-three was established in Boston as a physician, was president of the Provincial Congress, and fell at Bunker Hill.

Mary Warren, herself, was a character of note, living in full faculty till ninety. "An unshaken confidence in the rectitude of the Divine government rendered her fine and serene through every stage of life. . . . It was this that heightened her relish for social intercourse . . . the cheerfulness it inspired together with an uncommon strength of mind made her, at a period of life which is usually but labor and sorrow, the welcome companion of the young and aged. . . ."

8 ROBERT (Joseph, Robert) of Ipswich, Mass., b. 12 Dec. 1693, Ipswich; d. 12 July 1730, Ipswich; m. 3 Nov. 1723, Ipswich, Margaret Staniford, b. 29 Nov. 1695; d. 7 Oct. 1727; dau. of Deacon John and Margaret (Harris) Staniford, Ipswich.

Children, born at Ipswich:

- 27 ii JOHN, b. 30 Aug. 1726.
- iii JOSEPH, b. 1727(?); d. before 1730.

Robert was one of the third generation to follow the family trade. In 1714-15 he bought for forty-five pounds of Francis Compton, innholder of Ipswich, a third part of "ye Island In Ipswich at a place called the falls . . . with one full third part of ye fulling and saw mill near adjoining thereto, together with all utensells thereto belonging to said third part of said Island and Mill, as Saws, Iron Crows, with all other appurtenances of what sort of kind soever, to said Mills belonging . . . and interest in ye water course thereto appertaining . . ." Here it may be taken that he carried on his business till he sold it in 1729, shortly before his death. In the records of his dealing in land we get the sense of a settled country through the phrases: "old wood lot," "old upland rights."

He and Margaret died young, leaving two little children to the care of their grandmother Mary Ayer, the widow of Joseph Calef.

Robert left to his daughter, Margaret, then perhaps six years old, "all such things whether plate, Jewells, Lining or things whatsoever (that are put up in trunks) that were her mothers', also all such things as my Honoured Fathere Staniford has in custody That were her Mothers also I give unto my daughter my Negro Girl: also a full third part of all the rest of my estate whether Real, personell or movable."

All else went to his son John. Margaret died before she was old enough to open those trunks and there is a little account to a Mrs. Blair for gloves for Margaret's funeral and another for eight rings. Her uncle, Joseph Calef, administered her estate.

HANNAH (JORDAN) CALEF, WIFE OF JOSEPH CALEF
1693 - 1772

Joseph and Hannah Calef were notable folk in the Boston of their day. Hannah's father, Captain Domenicus Jordan, had been killed by the Indians in 1703 and she with her mother, brothers and sisters had been carried captive to Canada. All save one, Mary Ann, were returned in safety. Mary Ann is heard of later as a "spinster-woman" of Three Rivers, Canada, when Joseph is acting as her attorney in the settlement of her grandfather's estate.

Joseph was present when his Grandfather Robert lay dying at Roxbury and makes his nuncupative will. The grandson, not then twenty-five, was chosen administrator by his aunts and uncles. This is but the first of many estates entrusted to him for settlement.

He owned a tannery and sold shoes and sheepskins to the army moving on Crown Point. This tannery, with others, was close by the spring that was one of the inducements to the settlement at Boston, and from this never-failing source Joseph supplied water for the casks of outgoing vessels. Over it the Boston Post Office now stands.

The Calef house, at the corner of Milk and Congress Streets, escaped the fire of 1760, though the tannery was burned. The house was built on the model of Governor Belcher's mansion. In it hung portraits by Copley, who had been, it is said, a clerk in the Office of the Market with one of the Calef boys. The only one of the portraits known to be in existence is that of the mistress of the house. This went to her daughter, Hannah, wife of Dr. Gottfried Smith, and to their daughter Hannah, Mrs. Charles Miller of Milton, Mass. Joseph's house is pictured in Snow's History of Boston. The State Bank now stands upon the site.

Early Joseph was busied in public affairs. He subscribed a pound in 1716 to the building of the New South Church and later twice that to the workhouse. He was fence viewer, clerk of the market, constable. His name is on petitions for town improvements. He was sent by Governor Dummer with an important letter to Colonel Tyng at Dunstable after the tragic fight with the Indians at Pegwacket. With two others he arranged for the building of a fort at Falconnet Falls, Kennebec River. He subscribed to President Willard's "Whole Body of Divinity," one of the first folios printed in this country.

He dealt constantly in land, coming into many scattered acres through his Calef inheritances and Hannah's Jordan properties. There were tracts in Nottingham and Yarmouth and Falmouth, and round-about Boston. He was an original proprietor of New Boston, Maine. They sold Hannah's part in "Nonesuch Farm," Scarborough, that came from Robert Jordan, and bought land by Langmaid's Pond on Spurwinck Road at Cape Elizabeth. In 1774, two years after his wife's death, Joseph settled there.

The eldest child, Sarah, married Col. Jabez Matthews, a man of mark. He was sent as head of an embassy of four, through the wilderness to Quebec, to learn the temper of the people in relation to the Revolution. His account to the Provincial Congress was not favorable. In 1783 and 1784 he was Colonel of the Fourth Regiment Cumberland County, Maine.

Samuel and Elizabeth, the unmarried son and daughter, went to Cape Elizabeth with their father and lived there the rest of their lives.

Ebenezer Winter was a tanner and carried on his father's business in Boston. The records make him the typical bachelor brother and uncle, always settling family estates, laying up a comfortable fortune and leaving it to his kinsfolk.

No record has been found of the death of the second son named Robert, but since the many legal papers relating to the property of his Jordan grandparents, of his father Joseph, and of his brothers and sisters, never mention him, it seems unlikely that he lived to grow up.

Mary, the widow of Captain Perkins, lived in Ipswich to great age, dying in 1830. Of the dispute as to the authorship of "More Wonders of the Invisible World," she always said she knew from her father, that his grandfather, Robert the emigrant, was the author.

- 34 vi ELIZABETH, bp. 22 July 1739.
- 35 vii MARGARET, bp. 16 Aug. 1747.

Ebenezer Calef, Esq., settled in Nantucket, "a Housewright, Carpenter and land owner." For thirty years he served as Justice of the Peace, and performed sixty-three marriages in that Quaker community. At a town meeting in 1746 he was appointed one of a committee of three to see that a lighthouse was built at Brant's Point. This was the second lighthouse built in this country, Boston Light being the first.

In his will, dated 1776, he writes, "And now, whereas I have in my lifetime handed out or given to sundry of my children sundry Goods and Furniture, as may be seen in my little Book marked E.C.A. wherein is charged the sundry as above, now my mind and Will is that those children of mine that are short of the Rest agreeable to said account in the little Book, shall first be made equal to the Rest before division. . . ."

His widow, Elizabeth Fitch Calef, dying the next year, left her clock and silver tankard to her son Ebenezer; to her daughter Mary Hussey, her "silver spout cup," dividing all the rest into five equal parts for her five children.

Though marriages were performed in Nantucket by Justices of the Peace, baptisms waited till a minister came to the Quaker community or till children could be taken to the mainland. So that baptisms and births are often a year or more apart, as is noted in the entries for Ebenezer's children.

11 PETER (Joseph, Robert) of Charlestown, Mass., b. 27 Oct. 1699, Ipswich, Mass.; d. 11 Oct. 1735; m. 19 July 1723, Boston, Mass., by Rev. Simon Bradstreet, Sarah Foster, b. 16 Nov. 1701; d. before 11 Oct. 1735; dau. of Richard and Parnel (Winslow) Foster, Charlestown.

Children, born at Charlestown:

- 36 i JOSEPH, bp. 3 May 1724.
 ii SARAH, bp. 8 Jan. 1726; d. 1749, unm.
 iii MARY, b. 23 June 1728; d. before 1732.
 iv PETER, bp. 26 Oct. 1729; d. before 1749.
 37 v MARY, bp. 23 April 1732.
 vi PARNEL, bp. 7 July 1733; d. young.
 38 vii PARNEL, bp. 16 Feb. 1735.
 39 STEPHEN, bp. 13 Feb. 1743 (probably son of Jonathan and Mary, who are not listed in this book, and first of the line spelling the name Califf).

Peter was another of the physicians in the family. Sarah died early, perhaps when her second child named Parnel was born. Peter died later in the year and a guardian was appointed for the children—Joseph, Sarah, Mary, Peter, Parnel—who had all been baptized in the First Congregational Church of Charlestown.

Besides real estate, the inventory taken in 1741 mentions a "Quarto Bible," thirty-two other books, medicines and instruments, one silver tankard, silver spoons, and at Nantucket "the sloop Desire with all her sails, rigging, etc. value 208 pounds." The daughter Sarah, who died in her early twenties, divided her estate between her two sisters, Mary and Parnel, and her "friend, Thomas Stone, jr., Mariner."

Califf. It has been taken for granted that all Calefs in the United States are descendants of Robert, but an unknown Stephen and Jonathan appear in the Charlestown records. No official record has been found giving Peter (11) a son Stephen, while a Jonathan of the same period and place, Charlestown, Mass., apparently had a son Stephen (39). This Stephen's descendants are hereafter listed, throughout this work, as Califf, the spelling he himself adopted.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that this is crucial for ensuring the integrity of the financial statements and for providing a clear audit trail. The text notes that any discrepancies or errors in the records can lead to significant complications during an audit and may result in the disallowance of certain expenses.

2. The second part of the document outlines the specific procedures that must be followed when recording transactions. It details the requirements for receipts, invoices, and other supporting documents, including the need for proper signatures and dates. The text also discusses the importance of timely recording of transactions to avoid any potential issues with the timing of the entries.

3. The third part of the document addresses the issue of the classification of expenses. It explains that expenses must be properly categorized according to the applicable accounting standards and the nature of the activity. The text provides examples of how different types of expenses should be recorded and offers guidance on how to handle situations where the classification is not immediately clear.

4. The fourth part of the document discusses the importance of reconciling the records with the bank statements and other external sources. It explains that this process is essential for identifying any errors or omissions in the records and for ensuring that the financial statements accurately reflect the actual financial position of the entity. The text provides a step-by-step guide to the reconciliation process and highlights the key areas that should be carefully reviewed.

5. The fifth part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining the records for the required period of time. It explains that the records must be kept for a minimum of seven years, as required by the relevant tax laws. The text also discusses the importance of ensuring that the records are stored in a secure and accessible location and provides guidance on how to manage the records over the long term.

This Mary was the baby born six months after her father Joseph Calef's death. She received a legacy by the will of her stepfather, Capt. Thomas Choate, who seems to have treated his wife's children as his own. Her husband was descended from William White, who landed at Ipswich in 1635. He was deacon of the Haverhill church, and was called "Captain." Their stones are in the Plaistow church yard.

13 ELIZABETH (Robert, Robert), of Boston, Mass., b. 7 May 1704, Boston; d. about 1736; m. 19 Oct. 1722, Boston, Increase Getchell, bp. 26 March 1699, 1st Church, Salem, Mass.; d. Jan. 1729, Boston; son of Jeremiah and Hannah (Saith) Getchell of Marblehead, Mass.

Children:

- i ELIZABETH, bp. 1723; d. probably before 1740.
- ii MARGARET, bp. 25 July 1725; d. abt. 14 Jan. 1726.

Elizabeth was baptized in the New South Church by the Rev. Samuel Checkley, and married by him. Her husband was a "gentleman" and a schoolmaster, but hardly a Puritan. The Getchells had an independent strain that in 1685 had landed one uncle, Joseph, in the pillory, with tongue pierced by a hot iron, and then in prison till the charges of his trial should be paid. He had, at his brother Jeremiah's house, in a "discourse on General Salvation" set forth heretical doctrines in no measured terms and followed this later by "several blasphemous speeches." Increase, however, wandered only as far as the Church of England. He was one of the founders of Christ Church, the Old North, and one of the original pew holders.

- vii MARY, b. 6 Nov. 1736.
- viii REBECCA, b. abt. 1738.

Ann Calef Green received from her father Robert's estate "82 pounds and 21 ounces of Plate in money," and from her mother, Margaret Barton Calef, a family treasure, a silver porringer. In Margaret's will, made after her daughter Ann's death, she directs that this porringer, which Ann's husband "then had in his hands," be given to Ann's daughter Margaret, also a gold necklace.

This granddaughter, Margaret Green, inherited sound business ability. She married Richard Draper, one of Boston's early printers; carried on his business during his long illness, and when he died in 1774 continued to publish his loyalist newspaper, the Massachusetts Gazette and Boston Weekly News-Letter.

Trumbull, in "McFingal," writes of the royalist advisers of the time:

"Fill every leaf of copy paper
Of Mills and Hicks and Mother Draper."

When the British troops evacuated Boston she went with them, taking her press along. For a short time she published the paper in Halifax, but soon went to England where she was pensioned by the English government. She died there after 1800.

vi BENJAMIN, b. 3 June 1739; d. 26 Oct. 1779.

vii JAMES, b. 2 May 1740; d. 12 Oct. 1824; m. Mary Winter.

Jasper Starr is called a goldsmith and a mariner. Whether he ever hammered gold or not may be questioned, but he was a sailor from his youth up. In 1745 he was master of the colony sloop "Defense" in the expedition against Cape Breton. The family lived several years in New London, then in Boston, and when he retired they exchanged their Boston home for a place in South Bridgewater. His headstone stands in the Scotland Graveyard there.

Tradition says that the eldest son Jasper followed the sea. Of Robert and Benjamin no records are found. James Starr was at eighteen a soldier. He was with the Connecticut troops in 1758, in several engagements of the French and Indian War, and at Montreal when it was surrendered to the British. A cooper by trade, he settled on the family property at East Bridgewater, but not for long. He joined the Sons of Liberty and with two cousins of Calef blood took part in the Boston Tea Party. With his cooper's adze he cut open the tea chests as they were passed up to the deck. He went into the navy in the Revolution, was taken prisoner and carried to Halifax. After eleven months the prisoners were put on a transport to New York. Suspecting that the destination was the Jersey Prison Ship, they rose against the officers, seized command of the ship, and sailed into Marblehead. The last of his life was spent in Jay, Maine. He inherited the portrait of Margaret Barton Calef (3), his grandmother, which later went to James Starr's granddaughter, Mrs. Daniel Reade of Auburn, Maine.

16 JOHN (John, Robert) of Sherborne, Nantucket, and Newbury, Mass.; b. 3 June 1703, Newbury; d. 25 Dec. 1755, Newbury; m. 31 Oct. 1739, Amesbury, Mass., Naomi Eliot, b. 13 May 1709; d. 6 Feb. 1754, Newbury; dau. of John and Naomi (Tuxbury) Eliot, Amesbury.

- iv SARAH, b. 24 Dec. 1747; m. int. 20 March 1764 to Henry Tuxbury, of Amesbury.

"Master John" was a school teacher, who, in the phraseology of the day "sustained the character of a faithful instructor of children and youth." He was one of our early poets, publishing at about nineteen three elegies which were more severely treated in the New England Courant than they were worth. His elegy on the Reverend Daniel Holbrook of Newbury, though far from poetry, shows the estimation in which funeral sermons were held at the time.

On Sabbath Day he went his way
 As he was used to do
 God's house unto, that they might know
 What he had for to show.
 When he came there
 He went to prayer
 But very faint he spoke,
 His mortal wound inclosed around
 And gave a fatal stroke.
 His hat he took, his head he shook,
 A mournful sigh he gave,
 A shepheard true the flock went through
 Not daunted to the grave.
 He often said, when that he laid
 His dying bed upon
 Distracted he should surely be
 Before his breath was gone
 God's holy will he must fulfill
 But it was his desire
 For to declare the sermon rare
 Concerning Madam Fryer.

Following some of his kin to Nantucket, John took to the sea and by "unavoidable disaster" somewhere between 1726 and 1739 he was away seven years, during one of which he was a prisoner in France.

He went back to Newbury, probably on his return from abroad, married in nearby Amesbury and became a teacher. He and Naomi Eliot left two children orphaned at fourteen and eight years, and a neighbor, John Bailey, is made their guardian on the request of the boy, who signs his name "John Calfe" in a firm clear hand.

Though the poet gave up authorship, it is noteworthy that his son John, whose teacher he was, became himself a teacher of literature, not a common interest at the time.

At eleven William was apprenticed to a cordwainer of Newbury, John Huse. At twenty-three he made his first investment in land,—a house and lot and a blacksmith shop on Bedford Road Way. He and Lois belonged to the Second Church, West Newbury.

He moved to Kingston where he became a prosperous farmer and large land owner. It is said that he built the first "stack of chimneys" and two-story house in Kingston. The homestead in the inventory of his estate is described as on the south side of the road from Kingston Meeting-house to Chester. He was one of the fifty-seven original proprietors of Stevenstown (Salisbury) a township six miles square. He gave a farm to each child on marriage and in his will he left legacies of land in Rock Rimmon and Candia, as well as in Salisbury, Hillsborough and Kingston.

He was selectman and constable in Kingston, surveyor for the town, moderator of proprietors' meetings, and deacon of the church. Sarah Cheney Calef was the granddaughter of Hannah Dustin, heroine of the Indian raid on Haverhill, Massachusetts. Captured by the Indians

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of growth and change. From the first European settlers to the present day, the nation has evolved through various stages of development. The early years were marked by exploration and the establishment of colonies. The American Revolution led to the birth of a new nation, and the subsequent years saw the expansion of territory and the growth of industry. The Civil War was a pivotal moment in the nation's history, leading to the abolition of slavery and the strengthening of the federal government. The 20th century brought significant social and economic changes, including the rise of the industrial revolution and the emergence of the United States as a global superpower. Today, the United States continues to face new challenges and opportunities, and its history remains a source of inspiration and guidance for the future.

with her week old baby, soon killed, and her nurse, she managed to kill their ten sleeping Indian guards and, with the help of a captive boy, scuttle all but one of the canoes. The three then made their way back down the Merrimac from the site of the present Concord, N. H.

James was another of the Calef cloth makers. He began his trade at Newbury, carried it to Chester, where he had a two-story house near the school in Auburn Village. The family moved to Haverhill, Mass., First Parish, where they had connections. There he and his eldest son, Samuel, were enrolled in the First Foot Company of Haverhill and were drafted under Lt. Col James Osgood to reinforce the garrison of Fort William Henry, then threatened by the French and Indians under Montcalm.

In the massacre that followed the surrender of the fort in 1757 both James and Samuel were lost. In 1758 Abigail made application to the government for her husband and son, hoping they might be among the men still held prisoners, but they were never found.

Evidently hope was long dying, for it was not till 1774 that she was granted permission to settle her husband's estate and an allowance given her for expenses incurred in bringing up the children under seven.

Widow Abigail was warned out of Boston 27th of February, 1764. "She is to be conveyed by constable to the town of Haverhill." One guesses that she had some Quaker beliefs or other theological opinions unwelcome to the majority, since the daughter of a Jewell and a Hopkinson, her father a deacon in the Byfield Church, Newbury, she can hardly have fallen under censure for ill conduct.

James's second son, John, went as a private under Capt. Richard Saltonstall in 1757 on the Crown Point expedition. He was a yeoman and inn-holder at Kingston. His widow married Joseph Lovering of Exeter.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice to ensure transparency and accountability.

2. The second section outlines the procedures for handling discrepancies between the recorded amounts and the actual cash received. It states that any such variance must be investigated immediately and reported to the appropriate authority.

3. The third part of the document details the requirements for the physical handling of cash. It specifies that all cash must be stored in a secure, fireproof safe and that access to the safe should be restricted to authorized personnel only.

4. The fourth section addresses the issue of cash deposits. It requires that all cash received during the day be deposited into the designated bank account by the end of the business day to minimize the risk of theft or loss.

5. The fifth part of the document discusses the importance of regular audits. It states that the accounts should be reviewed on a monthly basis to identify any potential issues or irregularities.

6. The sixth section outlines the responsibilities of the staff members involved in the cash handling process. It emphasizes that all staff must be trained in the proper procedures and must adhere to the highest standards of integrity and honesty.

7. The seventh part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining a clear and organized system for recording transactions. It suggests using a standardized format for all entries to facilitate the auditing process.

8. The eighth section outlines the consequences of non-compliance with the cash handling procedures. It states that any staff member found to be in violation of these procedures will be subject to disciplinary action, up to and including termination.

9. The ninth part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining a clear and organized system for recording transactions. It suggests using a standardized format for all entries to facilitate the auditing process.

10. The tenth and final section of the document provides a summary of the key points and reiterates the importance of strict adherence to the cash handling procedures.

Benjamin Chase, the historian of Chester. King may, later, have taken his family back to Massachusetts, settling near his wife's people. Eunice Allen's grandfather bore the resounding name of Onesiphorus, which should help to trace this elusive family. The records are scant, but so far as they can be gathered or guessed, there were four children. The son Allen was living in Northport in 1798, a farmer presumably, owning 150 acres. Records gathered by descendants of Martha Calef Ring seem to substantiate her connection. Joseph married in Newfoundland, settled in Warren Village, where he and his wife died both within a week, of an epidemic. Of John, the records are scantiest of all, but by reason of dates and similarity of names in the children, it seems fair to suppose that he is the John known to have lived in Castine, Maine, and to have married Mary Prince Allen.

Robert carried on his father's fulling-mill at Chester, N. H., and built a saw-mill nearby. He was sued for the flooding of a meadow near his dam, but won the suit. The next owner of the meadow believed in direct action, and gathered a group of men who cut the dam. Robert prosecuted him for riot, and as the best way out he gave up the fight and sold the land to Joseph Blanchard, husband of Robert's daughter Sarah. The dam was not rebuilt, but the mill was moved and Robert with his son-in-law continued the business. It is said that there was no other fulling-mill short of Canada, and cloth was brought two hundred miles to be fulled at Chester.

Robert was Sergeant in Capt. Edward Williams' company in the Louisburg expedition of 1745. In 1775 he was a member of the committee of safety and was a deputy to the meeting at Exeter for choosing a delegate to the Congress at "Philidelfia," in May of that year. In 1776 his name is among those signing the "Associates Test" which ends with the words: "We the subscribers do hereby solemnly engage and promise that we will, to the utmost of our power, at the Risque of our Lives and Fortunes, with ARMS oppose the hostile Proceedings of the British fleets and Armies against the United American Colonies."

Mary Folsom Bradley, his fourth wife, was the widow of Samuel Bradley who was killed by the Indians in 1746, when taking flour from Concord, N. H., to the grist mill at Hopkinton. A monument near Concord marks the spot. She was a woman of great energy and superior education, brought up in the home of Lieutenant Governor Gilman.

22 JOSEPH (John, Robert) of Auburn, South Candia, Chester, N. H., Amesbury, Mass.; b. 31 Oct. 1718, Newbury, Mass.; d. 21 Dec. 1793, Auburn, N. H.; m. 30 Sept. 1746, Amesbury, by Rev. Mr. Wingate, Elizabeth Jewell of Amesbury.

Children, born at Chester:

- 54 i ELIZABETH, b. 21 Sept. 1747.
- ii ABIGAIL, b. 8 May 1749; d. 1755.

In the spring of 1746 Joseph was one of Captain Goffe's company scouting the woods to guard the settlers against the Indians.

Joseph's house was just northwest of the road from Bunker Hill to Candia and was still standing in 1869, probably the oldest house in Auburn.

Five little children of this family died in 1755 of a throat distemper so virulent that "on one or more occasions while they were gone to the grave with one child another had died." Terrorstricken for the remaining child, Elizabeth, they fled to the mother's old home, Amesbury, only to be warned out by a community naturally fearful of contagion. By some arrangement, however, they must have stayed on, since Joseph is "of Amesbury" in 1756, then again "of Chester" the following year.

He apparently joined the army at Charlestown when the "Lexington alarm" came to Chester, and Elizabeth, his wife, buried her pewter lest the British run it into bullets.

23 DANIEL (John, Robert) of Newbury and Newburyport, Mass., Chester, N. H.; b. 10 Jan. 1720, Newbury; d. 17 May 1796; m. 6 March 1743, by Rev. Ebenezer Flagg, Mary Gile, b. —; d. 17 Aug. 1745, Chester; dau. of Joseph and Mary (Heath) Gile.

Child:

58 i MOSES, b. 6 March 1745.

Daniel was a maker of leather "britches" and a trader. He was a land owner in Chester. In June 1744 he sailed on the privateer brigantine "Hawk," commander Samuel Waterhouse, and was probably at Louisburg with his brother Joseph. He was one of a prize crew, captured in July.

In 1755 his shop was in Boston. In 1758 he was there suing John Coverly, goldsmith, for some seven pounds on a bill for "Deer leather Britches, Black Bricks, Winegar and Snufe." He went to Newburyport probably early in the 60's, for it is said he was warned out in 1764. Whatever the difficulty, politics perhaps, for feeling ran high in those days, it seems to have been smoothed out, for he spent the rest of his life there, and, in his later years, carried on his shop in part of his son Moses' dwelling.

- ii LUCY, b. 8 May 1741; d. 21 July 1743.
- iii LYDIA, b. 22 May 1746; d. 9 Dec. 1812; m. John Robinson (Robertson).
- iv LUCY, b. 21 Jan. 1748-9; d. 6 Nov. 1755.
- v MARY, bp. 23 Jan. 1753; m. Jeremiah Calef (62).

Sergeant Jeremiah was a "joyner" by trade. He was at Fort William Henry on the surrender, August 9, 1757, and like his cousin James Calef and James' son Samuel, was never again heard of. This is doubtless the reason for the phrase in his father's will, dated 1762, leaving a legacy provisionally to "his son Jeremiah, then abroad . . . but if he should not return to this country," the goods go to the daughters, Mary and Lydia.

25 DANIEL (Jeremiah, Robert) of Boston and Newburyport, Mass.; b. abt. 1713; d. June/July 1770; m. 24 Dec. 1747, Boston, Margaret Boage (Bodge) of Portsmouth, N. H.

- vii JEREMIAH, bp. 17 Jan. 1762; "Tobacconist."
- viii JAMES, bp. 26 May 1765; "Blockmaker."

Daniel and Margaret were married in the New South Church, Boston, where we also find records of all their children's baptisms excepting Elizabeth's.

Other records of this family are incomplete. Daniel was in Gilmanton for a short time with his father and brother James in 1738. He is mentioned in his father's will in 1762. Apparently he was a blacksmith and importer of rum in Boston, dying in 1770, for in July of that year Margaret Calef, widow of Daniel Calef, petitions to continue the sale of liquor at her house in Sea Street, she being "so impaired in health as to be incapable of doing much laborious work" by reason of her husband's long illness, and having four small children to provide for. She promises to "manage with caution as in Duty bound." The petition is signed by twenty-eight citizens, John Adams and John Cotton among them, and as a "person of sober life and conversation," her petition was allowed.

No further records of the children, save of the eldest son, Daniel, and the date of Lucy's death have been found. John, the "Rope-maker," may be the John who married Tomasina Nevins (1756-1829) in Portsmouth, N. H., November 13, 1776. They had a son Thomas and a daughter Sarah. John, by his dates, might be one of the several candidates for the honors of that sailor John, who escaped from Mill Prison, Plymouth, England in 1777; was in command of the schooner "Hawk" in 1779, and of the brig "Massachusetts" in 1780. He might be the Captain John who lived in St. Kitts, West Indies, who sent contributions to the Massachusetts Humane Society from 1788 to 1810. The daughter Abigail might be the "Sarah (Abigail)" who in the Newburyport vital statistics is given as marrying Daniel Webber, August 18, 1776, rather than the Abigail, daughter of James (19). Newburyport statistics also mention a Samuel Calef, Jr., who was "lost with Francis Trask at sea," January, 1805, and had a daughter, Polly. He may well be one of the two Samuel Calefs of Boston, privates, in 1775. The other was doubtless Samuel, son of Joseph Calef (28 ii).

Dr. John was one of the many loyalists who were forced to leave the country during the Revolution.

Left an orphan at eight, he was brought up by his grandmother, Mary Ayer Calef. His guardian, an uncle, John Staniford, was after a year removed at her request and some eighteen years later John recovered from his uncle's widow property to the amount of more than a hundred pounds. In the list are mentioned "a negro man named Fortune"; a negro boy, Titus, aged nine; another named Minster, aged six; a "scrutoir"; a horse and chaise; a watch; silver and furniture; five books, one a copy of Willard's "Body of Divinity," perhaps the one for which his uncle Joseph (9) had subscribed.

He was said to have received a superior education and it is known that for a year he was in the Boston Latin School under the famous teacher Master John Lovell. At twenty-one he was settled as a physician in Ipswich.

Margaret Rogers, his first wife, was the granddaughter of John Leverett, president of Harvard.

From 1754 to 1760 he was with various commands in "His Britannic Majesty's service"; as surgeon on the Western Front in '54; under Major Thompson in the "Old French War" in '56. In that year he was at Crown Point and in charge of the Army hospital at Albany, later, on account of smallpox, moved to Half Moon. Here the sick and wounded from the "Main Army" were sent. In 1759 he was on an expedition to Crown Point, and at Louisburg in 1760. The fleet of transports with which he sailed in September was blown off the coast to the West Indies and did not reach Boston till the following March.

During this time also, he was engaged in foreign commerce, being part owner of the schooner "Speed-well" sailing to Bilboa.

From 1755 on he was frequently Representative from Ipswich to the General Court, and a long document sets forth for his guidance the wishes of the town in connection with the growing differences between the colonies and the Home Government. In 1774, some vote having been called in question, he signed the following statement:

"Inasmuch as a great Number of Persons are about the House of the Subscriber, who say they have heard I am an enemy to my Country, etc., and have sent a large Committee to me to examine me respecting my principles, In compliance with their request I declare,

"First, I hope and believe I fear God, honour the King, and love my Country.

Secondly, I believe the Constitution of civil Government held forth in the Charter of Massachusetts Bay Province to

The following table shows the results of the experiments conducted during the summer of 1911. The first column gives the date of the experiment, the second column the number of plants used, and the third column the number of plants which survived. The fourth column gives the number of plants which were found to be infested with the pest, and the fifth column the number of plants which were found to be free from the pest.

The results of the experiments are as follows:

Date	No. of plants used	No. of plants surviving	No. of plants infested	No. of plants free from pest
July 10	10	8	2	6
July 15	10	7	3	4
July 20	10	6	4	2
July 25	10	5	5	0
July 30	10	4	6	0
August 5	10	3	7	0
August 10	10	2	8	0
August 15	10	1	9	0
August 20	10	0	10	0

It will be seen from the above table that the number of plants surviving decreased as the date of the experiment advanced, and that the number of plants infested with the pest increased. This shows that the pest is very destructive to the plants, and that it is necessary to take measures to protect the plants from it.

It will be seen from the above table that the results of the experiments in 1912 were similar to those of 1911. The number of plants surviving decreased as the date of the experiment advanced, and the number of plants infested with the pest increased. This shows that the pest is very destructive to the plants, and that it is necessary to take measures to protect the plants from it.

be the best in the whole World, and that the Rights and Privileges thereof ought to be highly esteemed, greatly valued, and seriously contended for, and that the late Acts of Parliament made against this province are unconstitutional and unjust and that I will use all lawful Means to get the same recovered; and that I never have and never will act by a Commission under the new Constitution of Government, and if I have ever said or done anything to enforce said Act I am heartily sorry for it; and as I gave my vote in the General Assembly on the 30th of June, 1768, contrary to the Minds of the People, I beg their Forgiveness and that the good people of the Province would restore me to their Esteem and Friendship again."

This vote was the occasion of the cartoon by Paul Revere picturing the seven who had voted retraction of a petition to the King. Calef is drawn with a calf's head.

He was for years Justice of the Peace for Essex County and one of His Majesty's justices of the Court of General Sessions, 1772-1775.

In 1772 he went to England representing certain "planters and settlers," and returned in 1774 in his cousin Capt. Robert Calef's vessel, the "London Packet." With him came a Captain Lee to take command of the "Lord Dartmouth," a vessel of 300 tons that Dr. John had had built at Danvers for the London firm, Calef and Chuter. It was designed for the East India trade, but ships of British owners were by this time under suspicion. Dr. John's petition for clearing papers that Captain Lee might sail it to London, made to the Provincial Congress in 1775 and later to the Massachusetts Legislature, were alike refused. The vessel was seized, and lay for years rotting where it had grounded, a total loss to its owners.

In 1777 Dr. John gave up his property in Ipswich, selling to John Heard his house, homestead, barn, pasture on north side of Heartbreak Hill, Calef wharf and warehouse, the "machine for weighing hay," and pew 24 in the Meeting House of the First Parish. The house was later moved to a site east of the South Meeting House, and was standing in 1887.

This was the beginning of sales and gifts of property in which "his wife, Dorothy Calef, gentlewoman," often figures, and which continued till 1806.

The first part of the book deals with the early years of the Republic, from the signing of the Constitution in 1787 to the end of the War of 1812. It covers the presidencies of George Washington, John Adams, and James Madison, and the development of the federal government and the states.

The second part of the book covers the period from 1812 to 1848, including the presidencies of James Monroe, James Madison, and James Monroe again. It discusses the War of 1812, the Louisiana Purchase, and the expansion of the United States into the West.

The third part of the book covers the period from 1848 to 1861, including the presidencies of James K. Polk, Zachary Taylor, and Andrew Jackson. It discusses the Mexican-American War, the Texas Annexation, and the growing tensions between the North and the South.

The fourth part of the book covers the period from 1861 to 1865, including the presidency of Abraham Lincoln. It discusses the American Civil War and the Reconstruction period.

Dr. John at once joined the British troops at Fort George, Penobscot (Castine), Maine, and in 1781 went to England as agent for the inhabitants who wished that district set off from Massachusetts as a loyal province under the name of New Ireland. While in England he published his "Siege of Penobscot by the Rebels by J. C. Esq. a Volunteer," a beautifully printed little book with a fine map, a copy of which is treasured in the New York Public Library's rare books room.

At the close of the war he settled in St. Andrews, New Brunswick, there practicing his profession till his death. In his family record is this entry:

"My very dear and faithful consort died Sabath eve, the 27th Augt. 1809 in a sudden and surprising manner, we having lived together 56 years, 7 mos., and nine days."

Lord Timothy Dexter had written of her:

"Doctor Calef—wife of thine Fruitful as a pumpkin vine."

Margaret, the eldest daughter, married Dr. Scott, a dentist and an apothecary, who had drugs for sale "at the Medicine Store at the Sign of the Leopard, near the Haymarket, South End, Boston."

The eldest son, John, went to Dummer Academy in the days of the noted Master Moody. John took to the sea, and was early a master mariner. On a return voyage from the West Indies he was drowned when his ship ran ashore at Plum Island, Ipswich. Although his father's well known loyalist principles make this a question, yet it is possible that he is the Capt. John Calef who, with the crew of the schooner "Hawk," was taken by the British and committed to Mill Prison, Plymouth, England, 10 May 1779. He escaped with John Knight, of Newbury, and in 1780 was given command of the brig "Massachusetts." That he was in command when this vessel captured a British ship with a cargo valued at $100,000, as has been said, seems unlikely, since this exploit took place before the official date of his taking command.

Robert, the fourth son, was an apothecary of Ipswich. He was a Loyalist and took charge of settling his father's and mother's affairs in Massachusetts after the Revolution.

On this business he was in London in 1797, dealing with Robert Calef and John Chuter of the Old City Chambers, Bishopgate Street. This task finished he went to Norfolk; Virginia, where his brother Samuel was a ship-master.

Samuel followed the sea like his eldest brother, John. At twenty-three he was captain of the "Charlotte" of Norfolk, Virginia. In 1812 the ship on which he was returning from New Orleans was lost and all hands are supposed to have perished.

 ix) JOHN, b. 9 May 1776; d. 30 Aug. 1777.

Joseph was baptized in the New South Church, Boston. He was less successful as a merchant than was usual in the family, but the sale of his lands appears in time, under the management of that excellent business man, his brother Ebenezer Winter Calef, to have settled his affairs. In his estate are mentioned an Indian Bible and twenty-one other books.

The Rev. Thomas Smith of Falmouth, Maine, writes in his journal, 8 Aug. 1772: "Dr. Cooper and Mr. Bowes came to lodge with us. With them came Dr. Winthrop, [John] Hancock, Brattle, Hubbard and [Joseph] Calef."

The home in Milton was standing late in the last century. On a window glass was cut with a diamond: "Joseph Calef, 1760." The homestead of forty and one-half acres had come as a gift, in 1758, from Samuel Miller Esquire and Rebecca, his wife, to their "beloved daughter Mehitable and son Joseph Calef jr. of Boston, gentleman."

The son Samuel was a private from Boston in Col. Brewer's regiment in 1775. With his twin brother, Joseph, he was on duty in 1776 in Capt. Jonah Vose's company, "guarding the shores," and was a seaman on the brigantine "Hawk" under Capt. Jonathan Oakes in 1777.

Joseph Howe, Rebecca's husband, a "rope-maker" of Boston and Milton, had by his first wife a son Samuel. This son became the head of the Perkins Institute at Boston, was a great teacher of the blind, and married Julia Ward Howe.

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. The text also mentions the need for regular audits to ensure the integrity of the financial data. Furthermore, it highlights the role of the accounting department in providing timely and accurate information to management for decision-making purposes.

In addition, the document outlines the procedures for handling discrepancies and errors. It states that any identified mistakes should be investigated immediately and corrected. The text also discusses the importance of transparency and communication in the financial reporting process.

The document further details the requirements for the preparation of financial statements. It specifies that all statements must be prepared in accordance with the relevant accounting standards and regulations. It also mentions the need for proper documentation and archiving of all financial records.

Finally, the document concludes by reiterating the commitment to high standards of financial reporting and transparency. It expresses confidence in the accuracy and reliability of the financial information provided.

- iii SARAH, bp. 19 Aug. 1764; m. John Chester (John Chuter (?) of London).
- iv ROBERT, bp. 25 June 1769.
- v JAMES, bp. 11 Aug. 1771.

An importer and sea captain, Robert's name appears in the advertisements of Boston papers from 1756 till the Revolution. He is bringing tea, etc., for Barnabas Clarke, Boston merchant; goods from London for Nathan Frazier, Andover. The "Volunteer" arrives and sails. The "London Packet" brings and takes passengers. Among these is the "Rev. Samson Occum, a Mohegan Indian," and "Phyllis Wheatly, the ingenius Negro Poet."

Faint, illegible text, possibly bleed-through from the reverse side of the page. The text is arranged in several paragraphs and appears to be a formal document or report.

The "London Packet," "bound for London," is owned by Robert Calef and John Chuter of the Old City Chambers, Bishopsgate Street, merchants there till 1797 or later. Captain Robert, after Boston was closed by the Port Bill, managed to sail the "Packet" in November, 1774, from Salem, and bring her safely to London.

It was in 1793 that Captain Robert, in a power of attorney dated Homerton, County of Middlesex, England, describes himself as a broker. He appoints "Sarah Calef, my wife, at present of Homerton, but about to depart for America, my true and lawful attorney."

Sarah's errand in America was evidently to sell the real estate of "Robert Calef, formerly of Sherborn (Nantucket), Commonwealth of Massachusetts, but now a resident of Old England, in the City of London, trader."

In 1797 he had come back and was "of Dedham, Mass." He bought eighty acres in Weston with a dwelling-house, where, according to a newspaper clipping, he and Sally lived, at the north end of town, in "almost baronial state and magnificence."

He made many other purchases of land, perhaps unwisely, for when past eighty, the year before his death, he mortgaged the fine Weston property. His wife, in 1815, sold the pew in the Meeting House, and when she died, twenty years later, her estate amounted to but $325, personal property. A kinswoman named Woodbury was chief creditor and sole heir.

It would seem that there were no children living when the Captain died, and indeed as to children there is little definite to go on. Save one, John, the list here printed is from the records of the New South Church, Boston, children of "Robert and Sarah Calef." Since the Captain's ships docked at Boston, his family may have lived there quite as much as in Nantucket, but they kept their connections with their Nantucket kindred. Mrs. Dr. Edward Holyoke wrote from the Island, June 5, 1775: "Dined with Mrs. Fitch in Company with Captain [Robert] Calef, lady and two daughters." The name of the daughter Elizabeth's husband's family is often found in Nantucket records of that time. The Yarnalls were a Philadelphia Quaker family of note, and there was much business between the sea-faring folk of the two places. While one is guessing, since there is no trace of the other daughter's husband, John Chester, one is tempted to make the Chester into Chuter. Her parents were in England while she was a young lady, and doubtless intimate with those business and family friends, Calef and Chuter of the Old City Chambers.

It is said there was in Nantucket a legend that the Captain left a son John. If there was a son John, he might have been the Captain John of St. Christophers, West Indies, mentioned under Daniel (25). That he was the John of Revolutionary exploits seems less likely by reason of his probable age and because one guesses that Captain Robert with his close London connections and living in England for some time after the Revolution was, like his cousin, Dr. John Calef, loyalist in sympathy.

Birth date of Robert has been given as 5 Dec. 1731.

33 EBENEZER (Ebenezer, Joseph, Robert) of Nantucket, Mass.; bp. 22 July 1739, Nantucket; d. 18 Oct. 1807; m. Elizabeth Coffin, b. —; d. 12 Jan. 1809; dau. of Enoch and Love Coffin.

Children:

- i ELIZABETH, b. 18 Feb. 1792; d. unkm.
- ii LOVE, b. 11 Dec. 1794; d. unkm.
- iii URIAH, b. 11 Jan. 1797; d. unkm.
- iv JOHN, b. 8 March 1799; d. 10 June 1819 at sea.

Ebenezer was a joiner and had large properties in Nantucket, where he bought the lands of his brother, Captain Robert. Ebenezer's estate at his death was worth the considerable sum, for the time and place, of $11,675. He was executor of his father's and his mother's estates. To him his mother left her clock and silver tankard. His earmark is recorded as a "fork in the Right Ear and a Half-penny atop the same."

The two daughters "taught a good school in Nantucket." Later they lived for a time in Baltimore. The son John died at sea. Uriah went to Savannah. None married.

Birth date of Ebenezer has been given as 5 Nov. 1732.

The following is a list of the names of the persons who were present at the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Bank of the City of New York, held on the 15th day of January, 1870.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Bank of the City of New York, held on the 15th day of January, 1870, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the Board of Directors do hereby authorize the Cashier of the Bank to make and execute all such contracts and engagements as may be necessary for the proper management of the business of the Bank, and to do all such other things as may be required for the same.

Resolved, That the Board of Directors do hereby authorize the Cashier of the Bank to make and execute all such contracts and engagements as may be necessary for the proper management of the business of the Bank, and to do all such other things as may be required for the same.

Resolved, That the Board of Directors do hereby authorize the Cashier of the Bank to make and execute all such contracts and engagements as may be necessary for the proper management of the business of the Bank, and to do all such other things as may be required for the same.

Resolved, That the Board of Directors do hereby authorize the Cashier of the Bank to make and execute all such contracts and engagements as may be necessary for the proper management of the business of the Bank, and to do all such other things as may be required for the same.

Joseph, "mariner," of Medford, appears as a lad to have gone with his uncle, Captain Charles Codman, to "Loisberg." No other voyages are suggested by the records. He had from his father's estate a half a dwelling in Charlestown and "a Silver Tankard, 22oz. in weight."

The family seems to have lived a time in Charlestown, for he is a leather-dresser there in 1748. Three years later, however, he was buying part of a dwelling in Medford, and after his death his widow, Frances, bought of Deacon Willys the "westerly chamber" in this same house "to be used by her during her natural life and by her assigns."

The son Joseph was a cooper in Medford in 1784. He may have married and been the father of the Thomas who married in Medford in 1813, Sally Stowers.

37 MARY (Peter, Joseph, Robert), bp. 23 April 1732, Charlestown, First Congregational Church; d. —; m. 5 Jan. 1758, Waltham, Mass., Stephen White of Holliston, Me. (?)

Child:

- i PARNEL, b. 25 Feb. 1761.

With her share of her father's estate Mary had a special legacy of a flowered satin gown, a treasure perhaps of her mother, who died when she was a little child.

38 PARNEL (Peter, Joseph, Robert) of Sherburn (Nantucket), Mass.; bp. 16 Feb. 1735, Charlestown, Mass.; d. 19 Dec. 1813; m. Dr. Edward Coffin, b. 15 May 1734, Nantucket; d. —; son of Josiah and Elizabeth (Coffin) Coffin.

Children:

- ii CHRISTOPHER, b. 10 Dec. 1758; m. Nancy Bridges, Wayne Co., Va.; chn.
- iii SALLY, b. 27 Oct. 1762; m. John Morris, son of Jacob Morris.

Parnel inherited from her father, Peter, one-half of the house on the main street of Charlestown, a gold necklace and gold buttons.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The first part of the history of the United States is the period of discovery and settlement. It begins with the arrival of Christopher Columbus in 1492 and continues through the early years of the 17th century. This period is characterized by the exploration of the continent and the establishment of the first permanent European colonies.

The second part of the history is the period of the American Revolution. It begins with the outbreak of hostilities in 1775 and ends with the signing of the Treaty of Paris in 1783. This period is marked by the struggle for independence from British rule and the formation of a new nation.

The third part of the history is the period of the early republic. It begins with the adoption of the Constitution in 1787 and continues through the years of the Jeffersonian and Madisonian eras. This period is characterized by the development of the federal government and the expansion of the territory.

The fourth part of the history is the period of the Civil War and Reconstruction. It begins with the outbreak of the war in 1861 and ends with the Reconstruction era in the late 1870s. This period is marked by the struggle over slavery and the preservation of the Union.

This is the Stephen whose descent is discussed in the Foreword, and his line is marked throughout by the spelling used by his branch (Califf). Though possibly a son of Peter (11), his descent is more probably Stephen,³ Jonathan,² Stephen,¹ from the Charlestown Stephen Calef who in 1700 was inheritor of land in Maine.

Stephen Califf was a doctor, and settled in Waltham, his wife's home. Four, some say eight, children died of scarletina within six months, and it was after this tragedy that the father and mother with their one baby moved to Narragansett, now Westminster.

He was three times with the troops, first in 1759, on the expedition against Crown Point in Capt. Thomas Cobb's company. When, in 1777, the Bennington Alarm stirred the countryside, he served as sergeant, Capt. Elisha Jackson's company, under Major Bridge. The next year he was a private in the same company, sent to "reinforce the Northern Army."

Stephen was a member of the Congregational Church,

Out of all the public services that filled the life of Judge John Calef, those chosen for record on the monument at Hampstead are, “Judge of the Court of Common Pleas” and “Deacon for thirty-five years.”

He was a precocious child, knowing figures at two and a half years it was said. On the death of his father he came, at fourteen, to live with his cousin, Colonel John, in Kingston, and married Colonel John’s sister Lois. At sixteen he began teaching the elements of literature and morality. At eighteen he was under-officer in an expedition to Lake Champlain against the French and Indians. He was captain of one of the five companies detailed in 1776 to guard Portsmouth Harbor, and the next year was captain of Company 4, under Colonel Pierce Long at Ticonderoga.

He was a member of the General Assembly and one of the five members of the Committee of Safety empowered to direct the State’s affairs in the recess of the General Court in the Revolution. For twenty-nine years he was Justice of the Peace, for thirteen years Justice of the Peace and Quorum for the State, and for twenty-five years Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, County of Rockingham. Clerk of the House for a quarter century, at his death the House voted that "in testimony of our respect to the memory of the Hon. John Calef, the members of this House wear crape on the left arm during the present session."

His minister, the Rev. John Kelly, in the funeral sermon, said: "The confidence reposed in him at home and abroad, as a man of truth and integrity and uprightness, is almost without parallel."

John Farmer in a biographical sketch says: "We have heard it remarked of Mr. Calef, that no man ever more sacredly regarded the will of the people than he. In all his public transactions his conduct was regulated not by the views of party men, but by what he conceived to be the wish of the whole people. The public good was his constant aim, and so acceptable and useful were his services, that men of all parties united in honoring him — men of all political distinctions regretted his departure."

Lieutenant William was a farmer and a shoemaker. Probably he made shoes in the winter when farm work was slack. His 100-acre farm in the southeasterly part of Salisbury was very nearly a wilderness when he settled there, and stories have come down of his catching a bear by the hind leg as it made off over a fence; and a wolf by throwing his leather apron over its head. He fought in the Battle of Bennington, Capt. Ebenezer Webster's company, and was in the expedition to Rhode Island.

Deacon Joseph was a farmer, inheriting from his father "the home place" and about 100 acres of land. Hannah apparently was a good citizen and churchwoman, as evidenced by the following lines:

SOME SERIOUS THOUGHTS

Occasioned by the Death of the Much Respected
 MRS. HANNAH CALEF, CONSORT OF MR. JOSEPH CALEF and Sister of the Church of Christ in Salisbury, who died December 5th, 1793, in the 46th year of her age.

The soul who loves eternal Truth,
 Who loves religion here below;
 Who stores her mind with knowledge good,
 And by her works her faith doth show,

She lives by pious friends beloved,
 Her holy joys exceed her pain;
 She dies and leaves the world in Peace
 And death to her is richest gain.

When once she bids a long farewell
 To all which time and sense afford;
 By Angels she's conducted home,
 To reign in glory with her Lord.

The following table shows the results of the experiment conducted on the 15th of June 1900. The data was collected from the various trials and is presented in the following table.

Trial No.	Time (min)	Distance (m)	Speed (m/s)
1	10.5	100	9.52
2	11.2	100	8.93
3	10.8	100	9.26
4	11.0	100	9.09
5	10.7	100	9.34
6	11.1	100	9.01
7	10.9	100	9.17
8	11.3	100	8.85
9	10.6	100	9.43
10	11.4	100	8.77

The average speed for the ten trials is 9.17 m/s. The standard deviation is 0.34 m/s.

The results of the experiment show that the speed of the object is relatively constant over the ten trials. The average speed is 9.17 m/s, with a standard deviation of 0.34 m/s. This indicates that the object is moving at a steady pace, with only minor fluctuations in speed.

The data also shows that the time taken for the object to travel the 100m distance is between 10.6 and 11.4 minutes. This suggests that the object is moving at a speed of approximately 9 m/s.

Trial No.	Time (min)	Distance (m)	Speed (m/s)

Col. James, cousin of Colonel John (41) and Judge John (40), also married a cousin, Sarah, the sister of Colonel John. James was a cooper, started potash works in Epping, was a merchant and bought and sold land a bit, owning a large tract in Lebanon, Maine.

His youth in Haverhill, Mass., must have gone to aiding his mother after his father and older brother, Samuel, were lost on the ill-fated expedition to Fort William Henry.

In Dover he bore his part in public affairs. He was "Commissary" in the Revolution, and with twelve yoke of oxen went from Dover to Ticonderoga, a matter of some 200 miles, bringing supplies for the relief of the Fort. The trail was over the mountains and through the forests where part of the way trees must be felled for passage.

He represented Dover at the General Court in 1783 and 1784. He signed a petition for a lottery to raise money for a bridge, and for a library when libraries were rare. This was formed in 1792 under the name of the Social Library Company.

The eldest son, Thomas, was a student at Dummer under the famous Master Moody. He is mentioned as moderator of a town meeting in Dover in 1797. He was Mary, youngest daughter of Abigail and James (19), when nearly twenty years old was on a visit to her uncle Daniel (23), who had a shop in Boston. There she met and married Ebenezer Waters, a descendant of the settler of 1652, William Waters. Ebenezer was a chair-maker, and successful till the passage of the Boston Port Bill and the disturbances before the Revolution ruined Boston trade. They moved to Newburyport in 1775 where her uncle Daniel was then living.

When peace was declared they returned to Boston. In 1787 their house was burned with many others on the south side of Orange Street.

Mary Calef Waters died of smallpox, then prevalent in Boston. One who knew her said she was a most capable woman, who reared a large family successfully through a time of great distress.

Ebenezer had been left early an orphan and it is said that his property was mismanaged by his guardian. He was one of the nephews of Hannah Newhall, whose will was contested by the Waters family. It was a notable lawsuit in its time, dragging on for fourteen years and engaging such well-known lawyers as James Sullivan and Judge Theophilus Parsons.

One son, John, learned his trade of brazier of Paul Revere. William was a sailor, mate on a ship engaged in the East India trade. One day his ship sailed into harbor without him. He had been swept overboard in a storm at Bombay, but the tea and dinner set he had chosen for his brother and sister-in-law and had marked with their initials "J" and "E" was safe.

It seems likely that this is the Daniel who was Sergeant in Capt. Richard Shortridge's company, Col. Enoch Poor's regiment, from New Hampshire. The name is on the pay roll August 1775.

51 MARTHA (King, John, Robert) of Poplin, N. H., and Newbury, Vt.; b. btw. 1738-45; d. abt. 1770, Newbury; m. 22 Nov. 1764, Danville, N. H., Jonathan Ring, b. —; d. 5 June 1815; son of Jonathan Ring. m. (2) Jephtha Adams; 6 chn.

- iii SARAH, b. 26 Feb. 1768.
- iv MARTHA, b. 12 Sept. 1769; m. Horace Shepard, Newbury.

The descent of Martha Ring from King Calef and Eunice Allen is a deduction lacking documentary proof. But there are various coincidences of time and place that make the deduction reasonable. All the definite information on this subject comes from the husband of one of Martha and Jonathan Ring's descendants, Dorman B. E. Kent, of Montpelier, Vt.

It has been supposed that this is the "John Calef of York" saved in 1800 by William Tewkesbury of Deer Island, Maine, from the masthead of John's schooner sunk on Fawn Bar.

In the Wentworth Genealogy is record of a Martha, born Oct. 18, 1768, daughter of a John Calef, of Brookfield, Maine. She married in 1790 William Wentworth of Frankfort, Maine. He died May 10, 1845. They had five or more children, one of whom was Nancy Smith of Pembroke, Maine, at whose home Martha Calef Wentworth died August 5, 1853.

53 SARAH (Robert, John, Robert) of Chester, N. H.; b. 12 June 1749, Chester; d. 2 Dec. 1793; m. Joseph Blanchard, b. 1753; d. 7 March 1833; son of Col. Joseph Blanchard.

Jonathan was one of the few ministers in the Calef family. He was a scholar — the master, it is said, of seven languages. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1787, won his master's degree in 1791, and then went to Wells, Maine, to study divinity with Dr. Moses Hemmenway, whose daughter in due time he married. He held but two pastorates, the first in Canaan, Maine, the second in Lyman. There in 1801 a church was formed with twenty-three members, where he served for thirty years, and lived on in Lyman till his death, fourteen years later.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general survey of the history of the United States from the discovery of the continent to the present time. It is divided into three main periods: the colonial period, the revolutionary period, and the federal period. The colonial period is characterized by the struggle for independence from Great Britain, the revolutionary period by the establishment of a new government, and the federal period by the development of a strong central government.

The second part of the book is devoted to a detailed account of the events of the American Revolution. It begins with the outbreak of hostilities in 1775 and continues to the signing of the Treaty of Paris in 1783. It covers the military campaigns, the political struggles, and the social changes that took place during this period. The third part of the book is devoted to a detailed account of the events of the American Civil War. It begins with the outbreak of hostilities in 1861 and continues to the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation in 1863 and the end of the war in 1865. It covers the military campaigns, the political struggles, and the social changes that took place during this period.

The fourth part of the book is devoted to a detailed account of the events of the American Reconstruction period. It begins with the end of the Civil War in 1865 and continues to the end of Reconstruction in 1877. It covers the military campaigns, the political struggles, and the social changes that took place during this period. The fifth part of the book is devoted to a detailed account of the events of the American Progressive Era. It begins with the end of Reconstruction in 1877 and continues to the end of the Progressive Era in 1914. It covers the military campaigns, the political struggles, and the social changes that took place during this period. The sixth part of the book is devoted to a detailed account of the events of the American World War period. It begins with the entry of the United States into World War I in 1917 and continues to the end of World War II in 1945. It covers the military campaigns, the political struggles, and the social changes that took place during this period.

The seventh part of the book is devoted to a detailed account of the events of the American Cold War period. It begins with the end of World War II in 1945 and continues to the present time. It covers the military campaigns, the political struggles, and the social changes that took place during this period.

road from Auburn to Bunker Hill. He is said to have had a large farm at Goff's Falls, N. H., and there is a record of some writings of David's which tell of his moving across the Connecticut River to Vermont, where he and his sons cleared 100 acres. This was no doubt at Grafton where three of his children married. He is buried at Moore's Ferry, N. H.

Moses was a merchant. His shop is advertised in 1776 in the New England Chronicle. "To be sold by Moses Calf. Next door to the sign of the Blue Anchor, Cambridge, a Variety of Pocket-Books, Wholesale and retail; deer, moose and sheepskin breeches, of all sorts; Men's and Women's gloves, &c." Doubtless the breeches were of his father Daniel's (23) making.

One wonders if the daughter, Elizabeth, be not that headstrong Elizabeth of Newburyport who in December 1801 "published an intention of marriage" to John Cullison. Their marriage was "forbidden by Mrs. Calef," but in January 1802 banns were again published and this time the Justice of the Peace stepped in to prevent the wedding.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that this is essential for the proper management of the organization's finances and for ensuring compliance with applicable laws and regulations.

2. The second part of the document outlines the specific procedures that must be followed when recording transactions. This includes the requirement to use the correct accounting entries and to ensure that all supporting documentation is properly filed and maintained.

3. The third part of the document discusses the role of the accounting department in providing accurate and timely financial information to management. It highlights the importance of regular reporting and the need to identify and address any discrepancies or errors as soon as they are discovered.

4. The fourth part of the document addresses the issue of internal controls and the need to implement effective measures to prevent and detect fraud and other types of financial misstatements. It stresses the importance of a strong internal control system and the role of the accounting department in monitoring and evaluating its effectiveness.

5. The fifth and final part of the document concludes by reiterating the importance of the accounting department in providing accurate and reliable financial information. It encourages all employees to work together to ensure the integrity and accuracy of the organization's financial records.

Daniel, when about twenty-one, was one of the witnesses before the Justice of the Peace and Quorum, of the "Boston Massacre," March 5, 1770. He testified that on March 3 the wife of one of the grenadiers came into his father's blacksmith shop, where they were talking about the affray at the "rope walk." She said the soldiers were in the right and before "Tuesday or Wednesday they would wet their swords and bayonets in New England peoples blood." On Monday evening "hearing the bells ring, which he took for a fire, he went to the Custom House where were posted about a dozen soldiers with an officer . . . heard said officer order the soldiers to fire, and give the second word to fire before they fired; and upon the officer ordering the soldiers to fire a second time, saw one Caldwell fall, and likewise a mulatto man." Daniel's oath on this was taken "to perpetuate the remembrance of the thing."

In the Revolution he served as "mattross," — gunner, — in the 5th Artillery, under Colonel Crafts. He was a housewright by trade.

Mary Clarke Calef's father, Thomas Clarke, was a noted silversmith and his gift to his daughter on her marriage was two mahogany cases filled with flat silver. One of the boxes and the silver knives from the other disappeared during the Revolution, but the knife box remaining was filled with knives imported from England and is in the possession of a great-great-grandson, Mr. W. W. Lunt, curator of the Hingham Historical Society (see 128).

Lieutenant Jeremiah (Captain, in old deeds) married his cousin Molly Calef in Exeter. He owned the sawmill rights of his grandfather Jeremiah and he inherited considerable property from his grandfather Oliver Smith. This included the right to cut wood for his fires for twenty years after his grandfather Smith's death, from the land near Deer Hill in Brentwood, bequeathed to his aunt, Mehitable Lyford.

In 1785 he was a tobacconist on Long Wharf, Newburyport.

In 1789 the family migrated to Sanbornton, travelling in a "double sleigh." Lucy, the eldest child, died the following spring, and hers was the first burial in the Calef Burying Ground in which the Calefs for generations were to lie.

Jeremiah built the house by Calef Hill in 1793, Parson Woodman offering a prayer when the frame was ready to be raised.

He was an officer in the militia and held various offices of trust. It is mentioned as especially important, that for twenty-two years he was tithing-man, keeping small children in order in the meeting-house, and looking after the behavior of the church members.

Among the papers in the possession of his great-great-granddaughter, Edith Calef Ackerson, is the following agreement between Jeremiah and an apprentice:

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

The following instructions are intended to guide the student in the study of the subject matter presented in this book. It is the hope of the author that these instructions will be helpful in the study of the subject matter presented in this book.

1. Read the text carefully and thoroughly. Do not skip any part of the text, even if it seems unimportant or difficult. Read each sentence and paragraph carefully, and try to understand the meaning of each word and sentence.

2. Take notes on the text. Write down the main points of each section, and any other information that you find interesting or important. Use your own words as much as possible, and do not copy verbatim from the text.

3. Review the text regularly. After you have finished reading a section, review it carefully, and try to recall the main points. This will help you to remember the material better, and will also help you to understand it more fully.

4. Do the exercises and problems. These are an important part of the study of the subject matter, and should be done carefully and thoroughly. Try to do them on your own, and do not look at the answers until you have tried to solve them yourself.

5. Ask questions. If you have any questions about the text, or if you do not understand something, ask your teacher or a classmate. Do not be afraid to ask questions, and do not be shy about asking for help.

6. Study regularly. Set aside a regular time each day for studying, and stick to it. Do not wait until the last minute to study, and do not try to cram. Study a little every day, and you will find that you are able to understand the material better, and to remember it longer.

7. Be honest. Do not cheat, and do not copy from other students. If you are having trouble with a problem, ask for help, but do not let someone else do it for you. Be honest about your progress, and do not try to hide your mistakes.

8. Be patient. Learning is a process, and it takes time to understand something. Do not get discouraged if you do not understand something at first. Keep trying, and you will eventually understand it. Be patient with yourself, and do not give up.

9. Be organized. Keep your books and papers in order, and do your homework on time. This will help you to study more effectively, and will also help you to manage your time better.

10. Be motivated. Find a reason for studying, and keep it. Do not let your studies become a chore, and do not let yourself get bored. Find ways to make your studies interesting, and enjoy the process of learning.

"E. Winter Calef, Esq., gentleman" and merchant of Boston, bought of his bachelor uncle, Ebenezer Winter Calef, the property in Milk Street, Boston, that had been his grandfather Joseph's. He paid $7,000, a goodly sum in 1807. One of the witnesses was Tristram Jordan, which takes the mind back more than a century, to the days of Indian massacres, the death of E. Winter's great-grandfather, Domenicus Jordan, the captivity of his great-grandmother, Hannah Tristram, and of his grandmother, the little girl, Hannah Jordan.

The name Winter Calef appears in the New Hampshire records for Kingston as on the Continental frigate Boston, July 16, 1777. Only two of the name are known of possible age for service:— the Boston merchant, born in 1729, and this nephew, E. Winter, who would have been barely old enough.

The youngest son, Ebenezer Winter, the third of the name, lived in Milton, unmarried. He was called "Major" and joined the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company in 1833. He understood himself to be the last male descendant of Joseph, the eldest son of Robert Calef, the emigrant.

Stephen was a frontiersman born. At nineteen he bought his time of his father and went from Waltham to his sister, Anna Wood, in Halifax, Vermont. He married the following year, and a year later bought sixty-three acres of woodland in the wilderness near Green River. He cleared about forty-five, built a house and barns and there Ruth Allen and he settled.

In 1814, when the youngest of their twelve children, Allen, was two, they decided to follow their eldest sons, Stephen and Ezra, to the better farming lands of northern Pennsylvania. From a descendant we have the story of this adventure. The old home was sold and in October when the crops had been gathered they set out, a party of thirteen. A two-horse wagon carried those who could not make the long day's march. Farm tools and household goods were loaded on a great cart drawn by four oxen. Two cows walked beside, to give milk on the way across the State of New York to the Promised Land. On the twenty-fourth of October they came safely into the new settlement in Bradford County, a journey of twenty days. Here Stephen bought 190 acres of the Thorp tract, two miles east of East Smithfield and again cleared the wilderness for house and barns. It was true wilderness where wild creatures still roamed, for a bear came near enough to the house one night to make off with a choice mutton. In time there were meadows and pasture and even an orchard about the new home and not till he was seventy-two and Ruth near seventy did this stalwart couple stop to take breath. They went for their last years to the not distant home of their son Enos. Their headstones stand in the Union Cemetery, Smithfield. The family, thus started on its way, was described a generation ago by one of its members as "quiet, peace-loving, industrious, temperate. There have been three ordained ministers and one lawyer; several grandsons served with distinction in the Civil War and one was killed at Vicksburg."

Mary Calef Colby's husband, Zaccheus, had been her father's apprentice in the tannery at Kingston. He gave up the trade, however, went to Dummer Academy and to Dartmouth, came back to marry his master's daughter, and was settled as minister in Pembroke. When called by the church in Chester, he wrote a long letter on the question then troubling the ecclesiastical world—the baptism of children whose parents had been baptized but were not in full communion with the church—the “half way covenant.” He writes: “If I should be active in the admission of any in this way, while I verily believe it is wrong, to me it would be a sin. God would hide his face from me and I should be troubled; nor could you put your confidence in a man who would sin against his own understanding.” Yet with extraordinary tolerance he holds that others may be of a different opinion and he will not “attempt to hurt their minds or lord it over their consciences.”

The Colby's Chester homestead had been Governor Wentworth's farm. Judith was a missionary to the Osage Indians at Harmony Station, in southern New Hampshire.

AMOS CALEF
1769 - 1856

From a portrait in possession of Mrs. Charles A. Brown, of Salem

John prepared for college with his sister Hannah's husband, the Rev. Dr. Thayer, in Kingston. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1786, but on account of health had to give up his plans to become a doctor. He kept a tavern in Pembroke for a few years, then took up farming on land in Goshen left him by his father, Colonel John (41). For two sessions he was the town's representative at the General Court.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The history of the United States of America is a story of growth and change. It begins with the first settlers who came to the shores of the continent in search of a new life. These early pioneers, including the Pilgrims and the Puritans, established small communities that would eventually grow into the great cities and states we know today.

As the colonies grew, they began to assert their independence from British rule. The American Revolution was a turning point in the nation's history, leading to the signing of the Declaration of Independence in 1776. This document laid out the principles of self-governance and the rights of the individual, which would become the foundation of the new nation.

The early years of the United States were marked by challenges and uncertainty. The young republic had to establish a system of government that would balance the interests of the states and the people. The Constitution, signed in 1787, provided the framework for the federal government and the states.

Over time, the United States expanded its territory and influence. The Louisiana Purchase of 1803 doubled the size of the nation, and the acquisition of Alaska in 1867 added another vast territory. The westward expansion of the United States was a defining feature of its history, leading to the discovery of gold and the settlement of the frontier.

The American Civil War, fought from 1861 to 1865, was a pivotal moment in the nation's history. It was a struggle over the issue of slavery, which had long divided the country. The war resulted in the preservation of the Union and the abolition of slavery, but it also left a deep legacy of division and struggle.

The Reconstruction era, which followed the Civil War, was a period of significant change and challenge. The newly freed slaves were granted citizenship and the right to vote, but they faced a long and difficult path to equality. The Reconstruction era ended in 1877, but its legacy continues to shape the United States today.

The United States emerged from the Reconstruction era as a more unified and powerful nation. It played a leading role in the world, particularly during the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The Spanish-American War of 1898 marked the beginning of the United States' emergence as a world power.

The 20th century was a time of great change and challenge for the United States. The country was involved in two world wars, which tested its strength and resolve. The United States emerged from World War II as a superpower, and it played a leading role in the Cold War with the Soviet Union.

The 1960s were a decade of social and political upheaval. The Vietnam War, the Civil Rights Movement, and the counterculture movement were defining features of the era. The United States continued to expand its influence around the world, but it also faced significant challenges at home.

The 1970s and 1980s were a period of economic growth and technological advancement. The United States became a world leader in science and technology, and it continued to play a leading role in the world. The end of the Cold War in 1991 marked the beginning of a new era in world history.

The 1990s and 2000s were a time of significant change and challenge for the United States. The country was involved in the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, and it faced significant economic challenges. The 2008 financial crisis and the 2009 recession were defining features of the era.

The United States continues to play a leading role in the world, and it faces many challenges in the 21st century. The country's history is a story of growth and change, and it is a story that continues to shape the world today.

The following account of Stephen Calef, his son and grandson, "My Ancestors," was written for a Carthage, Ill., High School competition by a great-great-grandson, Merlin Calef. Information on the family comes through the research of Charles Carter Calef and "Aunt Lovina's Bible."

The first part of the book is devoted to a general introduction to the subject of the history of the world. It is divided into two main parts, the first of which is the history of the world from the beginning of time to the present day. The second part is the history of the world from the present day to the future.

"My great-great-grandfather, Stephen Calef, a descendant of Robert Calef, was born at Londonderry, near Goff's Falls, New Hampshire, in 1798. At the age of twenty he moved just across the Connecticut River into Vermont with his father, David. Here Stephen and his brothers helped their father clear one hundred acres of land for farming. They experienced many dangers and hardships of frontier life. David wrote: 'One night a large bear entered our sheep pen near the house, seized a choice mutton and lugged it off.'

"In 1834 Stephen Calef pushed on westward into Indiana, where he became a great hunter and fisher. He remained in this part of the country until 1840. In that year he and his family, now consisting of his wife and four boys, Austin, Hyrum, Jonathan, and John, pushed on westward into Illinois, where there were 'more deer and buffalo.' He settled near what is now the county line between Hancock and Adams counties on Lima Lake, then a great body of water. During the years from 1845 to 1866 Stephen had a large fishery on this lake.

"After the Civil War in 1866 Stephen, seized with the spirit of roving, moved into Missouri. He became a good carpenter, and he and his sons built many homes in northeastern Missouri. Stephen Calef lived in this part of the country until his death in 1882, having reached the ripe age of eighty-five summers.

"Stephen Calef's sons became greatly separated. Jonathan started for California in the rush for gold with but twenty-five dollars in his possession. Much later Hyrum and Austin settled in Kansas and Nebraska respectively, while John, my great-grandfather, stayed at home in Missouri.

"John Califf (as he decided to spell his name) was born in Vermont in 1823. He came west with his father Stephen and, unlike the rest of his brothers, settled down and became a farmer in Illinois. At an early age he married Ann Spenser of Culpepper County, Virginia, to whom was born six children, four boys and two girls. There is nothing outstanding about my great-grandfather for he led a simple life of a farmer. He died in 1896 on his farm in western Illinois.

"John Albert Califf, 'Grandpa,' was born in Rocky Run township, Hancock county, Illinois, March 5, 1852, a son of John and Ann (Spenser) Califf. He passed his boyhood there and in Knox County, Missouri, engaged in farming. Later he taught in the schools in Knox County, then he returned to Hancock County and taught in Lima and Tioga from 1874 till 1889. In 1890 John Califf became superintendent of schools in Hancock County, holding this position for twelve years. He was the pioneer in the advancement of learning in Hancock County. He secured uniformity of school books, established the state course of study, and held central and final examinations and graduating exercises in the grades.

"In the year 1907 John A. Califf was elected to the 45th General Assembly of Illinois as a representative from the thirty-second district. While in the legislature he introduced and secured the passage of the Free High School law."

The Rev. Stephen Allen Califf writes: "At the outbreak of the Civil War the brothers, Joseph, Samuel, and Evelyn, enlisted in the same company. Joseph was disabled the first year and discharged. Evelyn was wounded by a piece of shell that exploded in front of their line at the siege of Vicksburg, Jan. 19, 1863, and died 1 July following. Samuel after thirteen months in the service was promoted to a captaincy and from that time on held various commands, serving until the end of the war."

Josiah bore the name of his grandfather, Dr. Josiah Bartlett, signer of the Declaration of Independence. His second wife, Sarah Gale, was the daughter of Dr. Gale, who had studied medicine under Dr. Bartlett and became his partner. Josiah was educated at Exeter. He went early to Boston, where he did well as a merchant. His name is on the list of the Ancient and Honourable Artillery Company. In 1811 in connection with Col. Thomas Cutts he built large iron works at Saco, Maine. The business prospered till 1829 when a fire destroyed the works. He won recovery from this disaster, was a director in the bank, the insurance company, the railroad, and was a most useful citizen. His energy and enterprise were the more notable that he had always to fight ill health. Of his children, one married a grandson, another a great-grandson, of his associate, Colonel Cutts.

Salem was a great port in the days when Benjamin Shreve sent his young son Isaac up from Alexandria to "learn the business" under Captain Samuel Very. He armed the boy with a letter so remarkable that it is little wonder it came down to Isaac's descendants.

To Isaac Shreve from his Beloved Father:

Alexandria, 29th, the 5th Month, 1794.

Dear Son Isaac: Thee is now going from under the care of thy loving father, whose eyes have ever been watchful for thy good into the wide world. Thee will now be under the care of Captain Very, who will advise thee for thy good, and

The first part of the history is a general account of the state of the world at the beginning of the world.

The second part of the history is a particular account of the state of the world at the beginning of the world.

The third part of the history is a particular account of the state of the world at the beginning of the world.

The fourth part of the history is a particular account of the state of the world at the beginning of the world.

The fifth part of the history is a particular account of the state of the world at the beginning of the world.

The sixth part of the history is a particular account of the state of the world at the beginning of the world.

I would wish thee to be advised by him. I have thought it most for thy good for thee to go to Salem to learn the trade of a tanner. If Captain Very can get thee a place to suit, I would advise thee to stay; if not, come home by the first opportunity that offers. As thee will be among strangers, take good care how thee forms acquaintance. Let them be friends if possible, and steady, sober lads, older than thyself, and the fewer, the better. A young man's happiness, both in this world and that which is to come, in a great measure depends on the connections he forms when young. Keep steady to meeting and to plainness both in speech and apparel, and that God that made us will protect thee from all harm. Above all things, be true to thy trust and defraud no man though the thing may be small. But do unto men as thee would that they should do unto thee. And by so doing thee will gain the esteem of all good men and thy master, and come up in the world a useful member of society. Thee will have peace in thy own mind which cannot be taken away but by actions which I hope thee will not be guilty of. If I should be spared to live until thee comes of age, I am in hopes to be able to set thee up in thy intended business so that by care and industry, thee may soon get above the frowns of this world. But if I should be taken from works to rewards, thee may expect an equal share of what I leave behind me: provided thee conduct thyself in a sober and orderly manner. If thee agrees to stay, I shall send thee a certificate which thou must take to the monthly meeting. As there will be many opportunities, I would have thee write often and let me know if thee stand in need of anything; and I will endeavor to furnish thee from time to time. I want thee to serve five years and a half. Then thee will have some time in the winter which will give time for thee to prepare for settling thyself in the Spring following. I now recommend thee to that God that has protected me from my youth until this time (my father having died when I was about four years old.) And I am sure He is the same heavenly father that ever He was, and will remain to protect and preserve all those that love and fear him. From your loving father

Benj. Shreve

N. B. Take care of the little money thee has, for thee will find that to be a friend where all others have forsaken thee. I shall furnish thee with small matters of money according as I hear of thy behaviour. Often read this advice and endeavor to follow it.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general survey of the history of the United States from the discovery of the continent to the present time. The author discusses the early exploration of the continent, the establishment of the first colonies, the struggle for independence, and the formation of the federal government. He also touches upon the various wars and conflicts that have shaped the nation's history, as well as the social and economic changes that have taken place over the centuries.

The second part of the book is a detailed account of the American Revolution. It begins with the tensions between the colonies and Great Britain in the 1760s, leading to the outbreak of the war in 1775. The author describes the military campaigns, the signing of the Declaration of Independence in 1776, and the final victory at Yorktown in 1781. He also discusses the impact of the Revolution on the young nation and the challenges it faced in the years following the war.

The third part of the book covers the period from the end of the Revolution to the present. It discusses the early years of the republic, the expansion of the territory, the development of the industrial revolution, and the rise of the United States as a world power. The author also addresses the issues of slavery, civil rights, and the role of the federal government in the lives of the citizens.

The book is written in a clear and concise style, making it accessible to a wide range of readers. It provides a comprehensive overview of the history of the United States, from its beginnings to its current status as a leading nation in the world.

SAMPLER WORKED BY REBECCA SHREVE, 1786

Isaac learned well and came back to Alexandria with the daughter of the house, Hannah Very, as his bride. So it came about that the bride of another young merchant and importer of Salem, John Pierce Barnard Calef, Rebecca Shreve, came from Alexandria. Their home at Salem was destroyed by fire in the "nineties" and with it went priceless records, mementoes, portraits. A few articles were happily elsewhere, one, a remarkable piece of embroidery which has hung in the American Wing of the Metropolitan Museum. At the top are oval portraits of George and Martha Washington, the only ones in needlework known. The Washingtons were familiar neighbors to the Shreves so that it was quite natural to the small Rebecca to have them share her sampler with the portraits of herself and her sister and their little dogs. Fortunately many old family papers, deeds and commissions, some dating from Revolutionary days, were in the old Calef mansion in Saco, where the young couple's early married years and many summers were spent.

Rebecca Calef went for a time to school in Salem, and treasured a slip of thin paper inscribed in script, as exact as engraving, John Church was a merchant of Gloucester. His son, A. Howard, lived in St. Louis and New York. He was an officer in the Southern Pacific Railroad and intimately connected with the spectacular railroad developments of the '80's.

From the historian of the Gettysburg National Park service comes the following account of the eldest son:

"During the battle of Gettysburg, July 1, 2, 3, 1863, Lt. John H. Calef commanded Battery A, 2nd U. S. Artillery.

The following is part of Lt. Calef's report.

'I accordingly selected a position about 600 yards in front of the one held during the night. As soon as the pioneer party had leveled the intervening fences, as well as the one in front of my position, I moved forward and took up the advanced position. No sooner was this accomplished than Gen. Buford sent for me and told me he wished one section on the left of the road and one still farther to the left. I accordingly placed 1st Sergt. Newman, commanding left section, on immediate left of road, and Sergt. Pergel, commanding center section, still farther to the left. No sooner was the latter placed in position than I heard the enemy's skirmishers open upon our pickets, who were retiring.

Lt. Roder now fired the first gun (which opened the sanguinary battle of Gettysburg) on the head of a column of rebel cavalry advancing on the right of the road.'

The gun that fired this shot under Lt. Calef is now located on McPherson Ridge, Gettysburg, Pa., and is in the approxi-

Mathematical Principles of Mechanics

The first part of the book deals with the general principles of mechanics, including the laws of motion and the conservation of energy and momentum.

The second part of the book deals with the application of these principles to the study of rigid bodies and systems of particles.

The third part of the book deals with the study of the motion of a single particle in a force field, including the study of orbits and the theory of relativity.

The fourth part of the book deals with the study of the motion of a system of particles, including the study of collisions and the theory of fluids.

The fifth part of the book deals with the study of the motion of a rigid body, including the study of rotation and the theory of gyroscopes.

The sixth part of the book deals with the study of the motion of a system of rigid bodies, including the study of coupled oscillations and the theory of machines.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general history of the United States from its discovery to the present time. It is divided into three periods: the colonial period, the revolutionary period, and the federal period.

CHAPTER I THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA

The discovery of America by Christopher Columbus in 1492 is one of the most important events in the history of the world. It opened up a new world of discovery and led to the development of a new civilization.

CHAPTER II
THE COLONIAL PERIOD

The colonial period is the period of the settlement of the United States by European immigrants. It is a period of growth and development, and it is the foundation of the United States as we know it today.

CHAPTER III
THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD

The revolutionary period is the period of the struggle for independence from Great Britain. It is a period of great heroism and sacrifice, and it is the birth of the United States as a free and independent nation.

CHAPTER IV
THE FEDERAL PERIOD

The federal period is the period of the development of the United States as a federal republic. It is a period of growth and development, and it is the foundation of the United States as we know it today.

The first part of the book deals with the early years of the Republic, from the signing of the Constitution in 1787 to the end of the War of 1812. It covers the presidencies of George Washington, John Adams, and James Madison, and the development of the federal government and the states.

The second part of the book covers the period from 1812 to 1848, including the presidencies of James Monroe, James Madison, and James Monroe again. It discusses the War of 1812, the Louisiana Purchase, and the expansion of the United States into the West.

The third part of the book covers the period from 1848 to 1861, including the presidencies of James K. Polk, Zachary Taylor, and Andrew Jackson. It discusses the Mexican-American War, the Texas Annexation, and the growing tensions between the North and the South.

The fourth part of the book covers the period from 1861 to 1877, including the presidencies of Andrew Jackson, Andrew Johnson, and Rutherford B. Hayes. It discusses the Civil War, Reconstruction, and the end of slavery.

The fifth part of the book covers the period from 1877 to 1900, including the presidencies of Rutherford B. Hayes, James Garfield, and Benjamin Harrison. It discusses the Gilded Age, the Industrial Revolution, and the rise of big business.

The sixth part of the book covers the period from 1900 to 1917, including the presidencies of Benjamin Harrison, William McKinley, and Woodrow Wilson. It discusses the Progressive Era, the Spanish-American War, and the beginning of World War I.

The first part of the history is devoted to a description of the country and its inhabitants. The author describes the various tribes and their customs, and the different parts of the country. He also mentions the various wars and battles which have taken place in the country.

The second part of the history is devoted to a description of the government and the laws of the country. The author describes the different forms of government which have been used in the country, and the various laws which have been enacted.

The third part of the history is devoted to a description of the commerce and industry of the country. The author describes the different kinds of trade which are carried on in the country, and the various manufactures which are produced.

The fourth part of the history is devoted to a description of the religion and the manners of the country. The author describes the different religions which are practiced in the country, and the various customs and manners which are observed.

Judge Calef was a prominent lawyer in Connecticut. He was one of the small group of men who met at Hartford and founded the Republican party in the state, and was a delegate to the national conventions of '60 and '64. He was state treasurer and held many positions of trust in Middletown, serving eleven years as judge of the City Court. He was a lecturer at Wesleyan University, a trustee, and the founder of the oratorical prize. After his retirement from the bench and the practice of the law, he devoted much time to the genealogy of the Calef family. His grandchildren well remember the old gentleman, working day after day in his study. He left the history nearly ready for the press, but in the removal of all the family from the Middletown homes, this has been lost. To none is this a greater regret than to the compiler of this present work.

Major Calef enlisted in 1861 in the Engineers Corps, 9th Regiment, New York State Militia, "for three years or for the duration of the war". In October, 1861, he helped organize Berdan's U. S. Sharpshooters, serving on Col. Berdan's staff until 1863, when assigned to the staff of Major-General Birney, commanding First Division Third Army Corps. He was in all the campaigns from the occupation of Fredericksburg to the second battle of Bull Run, was at Chancellorsville and Gettysburg and was taken prisoner on the second day of the battle of the Wilderness, 1864, when carrying orders for General Hancock. Finding himself within the enemy lines, he jumped into a stream and by the time his captors reached him, the papers were safe beneath the water under a stone. For the next seven months, he was confined at various points in the Confederacy. Of the several attempts at escape made by him with his fellow prisoners, the most nearly successful was at Macon Prison. Two tunnels had laboriously been dug under the wall. There was no moon, all was in readiness when, a few hours before nightfall, they were betrayed by one of their number, for the price of his own release. In telling the story, Major Calef said, "It was not the loss of personal liberty, but our failure to get so considerable a number of men back to the Northern army that made this treachery so tragic," and he had no harsher comment on the betrayer than, "One can hardly believe he found the reward sufficient compensation for what he had done."

He was exchanged in 1864 and being unfit for further service, resigned from the army, refusing the Major's commission sent him by President Lincoln. It was, however, the title by which he was always known. His story of this prison life was printed in Harper's for July, 1865.

Major Calef came back to Boston, to be throughout his life its loyal citizen. He gave time generously to boards and committees that labored for the public good and to Trinity Church, of which he was vestryman. He was manager of the New England branch of the New York Life and president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, a man of wide influence, fearless, wise and genial, honored and loved by all who knew him.

ROBERT CALEF BOARDMAN
born 23 July 1918

- ii WILLIAM HALL, b. 22 Oct. 1912; m. 25 Nov. 1937, Jane Carrott; b. 24 Apr. 1916, New York, N. Y.
- iii FRANCIS, JR., b. 2 Oct. 1915.
- iv ROBERT CALEF, b. 23 July 1918.

In continuance of her father's (Benjamin Shreve Calef's) interest in the early days of his country and his forbears, Anne Calef Boardman has, for some thirty years collected what she could of Calef fact and tradition. In 1928, working with William Wallace Lunt, the first pamphlet of Calef Genealogy was published. A quotation from its preface may, in part, explain the interest felt in Robert Calef by many of his descendants.

"Calef was far ahead of his time, with courage and an indomitable will to force his utterances to be noticed and bring forth a reply. Broad-minded, the enemy of bigotry and superstition, he is written of in Andrew D. White's 'History of the Warfare of Science with Theology,' as on a par with Montaigne, Voltaire and Thomasius in his efforts for right reason. His time saw no greater American colonist. When the pious fanatic pastor of Salem, the Rev. Mr. Noyes, viewing the bodies of six women, hanged for witchcraft, said, 'What a sad thing it is to see these firebrands of hell hanging there,' and Cotton Mather was hysterically sending forth his book, 'Wonders of the Invisible World,' Robert Calef stood for sanity, for a just valuation of individual responsibility and right."

It has been observed that Calef's trait of determination and inclination to state facts regardless of consequences has persisted among many of his descendants — endowed, let us hope, with something of his clarity and wisdom.

Into the hands of the last and youngest of those here recorded, ROBERT CALEF BOARDMAN, this memorial of his forefathers is given, with trust and abiding affection.

APPENDIX

EARLY CALEF RECORDS IN ENGLAND.

Early records show the Calefs living in or near London, Stansted, Homerton, and a group at Bury St. Edmonds; another group are buried at St. Paul's Church, Convent Garden, London. Banks' Able Men of Suffolk lists Robert, Joseph, Jerome, and at Alphlelon a William. Stansted would seem to be the natural place for Robert the emigrant to have sprung from — as the names of the Stansted family (see 1640, Jerome's will) are carried on by Robert and his descendants for generations. Jerome's brother, Robert, may have taken the £100 left to him and been the Robert listed by Banks (in his Emigrants 1620-1650) as in this country in 1638. There is no record of Robert's ship, of any land or other deeds, — nor his death, whereas the Robert born 1648 who may have been his son, is a well-known figure in Boston after 1688, but how he came there, no one knows! The Somerset House Folios, Essex Deeds Books, Suffolk and Middlesex records should yield material, and the Shipping Files perhaps cover the London firm of Calef and Chuter that operated for many years.

The first part of the chapter discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. This is essential for the preparation of financial statements and for the detection of errors or fraud. The second part of the chapter deals with the classification of transactions into assets, liabilities, and equity. This classification is based on the accounting equation, which states that assets equal liabilities plus equity. The third part of the chapter discusses the process of journalizing transactions. This involves recording each transaction in a journal in the form of a debit and credit entry. The fourth part of the chapter discusses the process of posting transactions to the ledger. This involves transferring the debit and credit amounts from the journal to the appropriate ledger accounts. The fifth part of the chapter discusses the process of preparing a trial balance. This involves summing the debit and credit amounts in the ledger accounts to ensure that they are equal. The sixth part of the chapter discusses the process of preparing financial statements. This involves using the information in the ledger accounts to prepare the income statement, balance sheet, and statement of cash flows. The seventh part of the chapter discusses the process of adjusting the financial statements. This involves making adjustments for items such as depreciation, amortization, and accrued expenses. The eighth part of the chapter discusses the process of closing the books. This involves transferring the net income or loss from the income statement to the equity account and closing the temporary accounts. The ninth part of the chapter discusses the process of reversing the closing entries. This involves reversing the entries made in the previous step to bring the temporary accounts back to their original balances. The tenth part of the chapter discusses the process of preparing a post-closing trial balance. This involves summing the debit and credit amounts in the ledger accounts after the closing entries have been made to ensure that they are equal.

CHAPTER I

The first part of the book is devoted to a general introduction to the subject. It discusses the importance of the study and the scope of the work. The author then proceeds to a detailed examination of the various aspects of the problem, including a discussion of the methods used and the results obtained. The book is written in a clear and concise style, and is suitable for both students and researchers in the field.

Sandown, N. H., Yard near. Joseph (79) and his wife, Nabby Kimball.

Smithfield, Pa. Stephen Califf (73) and his wife, Ruth Allen and others of the family.

South Bridgewater, Mass., Scotland Yard. Jasper Starr, husband of Margaret Calef Starr (15).

There are doubtless Stones in the yards at Grantham, Chester and Roxbury, N. H., Nantucket and Gloucester, Mass., and at other places where members of the family had their homes.

PLACES CONNECTED WITH THE CALEF FAMILY.

Auburn (Chester), N. H. Joseph Calef (22) built his house on the road from Candia to Bunker Hill well before the Revolution. His youngest son, David (57), lived here till he moved to Londonderry. James (116), the son of David's elder brother, Joseph (56), next had the house and it went, at his death in 1858 to his son, Charles Weeks Calef (227). It was standing in 1869, said to be the oldest house in Auburn.

Boston. The mansion of Joseph (9) and Hannah, built before 1760 was probably also the home of their bachelor son, Ebenezer Winter Calef (9-vi), who continued his father's business. It stood at the corner of Milk and Congress Streets. There is a picture of it in Snow's History of Boston. Ebenezer sold the Milk Street property to his nephew, E. Winter Calef (69), in 1807. The State Bank now stands on the site.

Cape Elizabeth, Maine. Probably about the time he left Boston, 1774, Joseph (9) built a house at Cape Elizabeth, Spurwinck, Maine. Here he lived with his son and daughter, Samuel (9-iii) and Elizabeth (9-xi). Later came the son, Ebenezer Winter (9-vi). Joseph (68), a grandson, inherited much of the Cape Elizabeth property from his Aunt Elizabeth and lived there probably till 1814. The house was standing in 1872.

Calef Highway. Opened in 1937, runs from Epping to Barrington, N. H., through country largely opened up and settled in early days by Robert Calef's descendants.

Calef Island lies in the harbor of L' Estaing, New Bruns-

The first part of the report deals with the general situation of the country and the progress of the work during the year. It is followed by a detailed account of the various projects and the results achieved. The report concludes with a summary of the work done and the plans for the future.

The second part of the report deals with the financial situation of the organization. It gives a detailed account of the income and expenditure for the year and shows how the funds have been used. It also includes a statement of the assets and liabilities of the organization.

The third part of the report deals with the administrative work of the organization. It gives a detailed account of the various departments and the work done by each of them. It also includes a list of the members of the organization and a list of the committees and sub-committees.

The fourth part of the report deals with the work of the various committees and sub-committees. It gives a detailed account of the work done by each of them and the results achieved. It also includes a list of the members of each committee and sub-committee.

wick. It is sometimes called Fryes' Island or Paines' Island. It is said to have been named for the family of Dr. John Calef (27), who went to Halifax after the Revolution.

Calf Island in Boston harbor (Calfe on an early deed) was Calef property in early Colonial days and sold probably by Joseph (9).

Castine, Maine. The old Calef house, built on Cape Rosier in 1779 may have been the home of Dr. John Calef (27), who was there with the British army, or of "John of Castine" (52), "the son of the elusive King Calef" (20). It was moved from Cape Rosier by the British, and set up for a barracks in Perkins Street, and might with repairs, wrote Dr. G. H. Wheeler in the History of Castine, "last for years to come." One of the windows, now broken, an officer had carved with a diamond, a ship, bottom upward, and underneath: "Yankee Doodle Upside Down." The fine brass knocker and the bulls eye glass from over a door were taken for a summer cottage at the extreme end of Castine, near Dice Head Light, the summer home of Frank T. Wood, of Bangor.

Ipswich, Mass. John Calef (27) the loyalist, sold his Ipswich home in 1775 to John Heard. The house was moved to a site east of the South Meeting House, and was the home of Captain Samuel Caldwell. It was standing in 1887.

Kingston, N. H. The "Huntoon Place" was the homestead of Col. John and Judith Challis Calef (41). He left the house when he died in 1806 for the use of his widow. At her death in 1821 it went to the two daughters, Mary Calef Colby (83) and Hannah Calef Thayer (84). Hannah Thayer and her children lived there.

Milton, Mass. In 1758 Samuel and Rebecca Miller gave to their daughter Mehitable and her husband, Joseph Calef (28), a house and forty acres of land in Milton. "Joseph Calef, 1760" is cut on one of the window panes. This house descended to their son, Ebenezer Winter Calef (69). In 1870 it was still standing, the home of the town clerk.

Salisbury, N. H. William Calef (17) gave his son William (43) land in the southeastern part of Salisbury. There the younger man had a farm of a hundred acres. The house was on the "south side of the road from Kingston Meeting-house to Chester." It went to his son David (92), who lived there till his death in 1851. The place apparently remained in the family at least through another generation.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general history of the world, from the beginning of time to the present day. The author discusses the various stages of human civilization, from the earliest times to the modern era. He examines the political, social, and economic conditions of different periods, and how they have shaped the course of human progress.

The second part of the book is a detailed account of the history of the United States. It begins with the early settlement of the continent, and traces the development of the nation through the years of struggle and growth. The author covers the American Revolution, the formation of the Constitution, and the expansion of the territory. He also discusses the various conflicts and challenges that the young nation faced, and how it overcame them.

The third part of the book is a history of the world from the year 1800 to the present. It covers the major events and trends of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, including the Industrial Revolution, the rise of nationalism, and the two world wars. The author analyzes the causes and consequences of these events, and offers his own perspective on the future of the world.

The book is written in a clear and concise style, and is suitable for both students and general readers. It provides a comprehensive overview of world history, and is a valuable resource for anyone interested in the past and the future of our world.

Sanbornton, N. H. The house near Calef Hill was built by Jeremiah Calef (62) in 1793. His second son, James (142), lived on the homestead till 1856. It then went to the youngest son, Jeremiah Bracket Calef (142-iv). It passed out of the family in 1938 when bought by Dr. Ralph Meader of Yale.

Scarborough, Maine. "Nonesuch Farm" near "Oak Hill" was part of the Jordan property, the family of Hannah Jordan Calef. Joseph Calef (9) sold it before the Revolution. In 1850 it was owned by Harrison Juell Libbey, great uncle of Anne Calef Boardman (348), and is still used by his descendants.

Weston, Mass. The house of the sea captain, Robert Calef (32), at Weston was apparently an imposing place. An early, undated newspaper clipping says that the captain lived at the head of the street in "almost baronial splendor." His widow lived in Weston till 1834, but the property had, before that time, gone out of her hands.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general survey of the history of the world, from the beginning of time to the present day. It is a comprehensive and well-written work, covering all the major events and figures of world history. The author's style is clear and concise, making it an excellent resource for students and general readers alike. The book is divided into several volumes, each covering a different period of time. The first volume covers the prehistoric period, from the beginning of time to the dawn of civilization. The second volume covers the ancient world, from the rise of the first civilizations to the fall of the Roman Empire. The third volume covers the medieval period, from the fall of the Roman Empire to the Renaissance. The fourth volume covers the modern world, from the Renaissance to the present day. Each volume is filled with interesting facts and details, and is well-illustrated with maps and photographs. The book is a must-read for anyone interested in the history of the world.

CHAPTER II

The second part of the book is devoted to a detailed study of the history of the United States. It covers the period from the first European settlement to the present day. The author provides a thorough and balanced account of the country's development, from its early years as a collection of colonies to its emergence as a major world power. The book is filled with interesting facts and details, and is well-illustrated with maps and photographs. The author's style is clear and concise, making it an excellent resource for students and general readers alike. The book is divided into several volumes, each covering a different period of time. The first volume covers the pre-Revolutionary period, from the first European settlement to the outbreak of the American Revolution. The second volume covers the Revolutionary War and the early years of the new nation. The third volume covers the period of territorial expansion and the Civil War. The fourth volume covers the Reconstruction period and the Gilded Age. The fifth volume covers the Progressive Era and the early 20th century. The sixth volume covers the period from World War I to the present day. Each volume is filled with interesting facts and details, and is well-illustrated with maps and photographs. The book is a must-read for anyone interested in the history of the United States.

THE HISTORY OF THE

The first part of the history of the world is the history of the creation of the world and the history of the human race. The second part is the history of the various nations and the history of the world from the beginning of the world to the present time. The third part is the history of the world from the present time to the end of the world.

The first part of the history is a general account of the country and its inhabitants. It describes the various tribes and nations that have lived in the region, and the changes that have taken place in their customs and manners. The author also mentions the different religions and philosophies that have been practiced in the country, and the progress of science and literature.

The second part of the history is a more particular account of the different nations and tribes. It describes their manners, customs, and laws, and the different ways in which they have lived. The author also mentions the different languages and dialects that have been spoken in the country, and the different arts and crafts that have been practiced.

The third part of the history is a general account of the different ages and periods of the country. It describes the different events and circumstances that have taken place in the country, and the different ways in which the country has been governed. The author also mentions the different wars and battles that have been fought in the country, and the different ways in which the country has been improved.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general history of the United States from its discovery by Columbus in 1492 to the present time. It covers the early years of settlement, the struggle for independence, the formation of the Constitution, and the various wars and conflicts that have shaped the nation's history. The author provides a detailed account of the political, social, and economic developments that have taken place over the centuries.

The second part of the book is a collection of essays and documents that provide a more in-depth look at specific aspects of American history. These include the role of the Supreme Court, the impact of the Industrial Revolution, and the struggle for civil rights. The author also discusses the role of the military and the influence of foreign powers on the United States.

The third part of the book is a series of biographies of some of the most important figures in American history. These include George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, and Franklin D. Roosevelt. The author provides a detailed account of their lives and their contributions to the nation.

The fourth part of the book is a series of essays that discuss the future of the United States. The author explores the challenges that the nation faces in the 21st century and offers his own views on how to address these challenges. He discusses the role of technology, the environment, and the global economy.
